Industrial Spurt Opens 500,000 Jobs In 2 Months

Miss Perkins Reports Manufacturing Rise; Sept. Relief Rolls Up 172,645, However

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer.

Due to an accelerated advance in business, more than half a million of the Nation's unemployed were put back to work in manufacturing enterprises between the middle of August and the middle of October, Secretary of Labor Perkins estimated yesterday.

Re-employment in manufacturing industries, other than automobiles and canning, meanwhile, is going forward this month at a speedier pace than in September, she declared.

Miss Perkins estimated that employment in these industries was about 3.9 per cent ahead of the September figures. This is about three times the average seasonal pickup, she declared, and compares with a 2.4 per cent rise in September over August.

Estimates by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, she explained, are that the employment advance in manufacturing enterprises will exceed 200,000 from September to October. This follows a rise of nearly 300,000 from August to September.

Despite Seasonal Decline

But the gains in October over September, Miss Perkins pointed out, have occurred despite the seasonal employment decline in the canning industry involving about 50,000 workers.

Works Progress Administration figures revealed, however, that regardless of the unusually heavy reemployment, work relief rolls had increased by 172,645 from September 6 to October 4. The latter is the latest week for which figures are available.

Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, in a recent address, said the work relief roll had been reduced by 1,300,000 since January 1. This was done, he said, in the expectation that those dropped would be absorbed by expanding business, but few of them had succeeded in getting private jobs.

"Provide real jobs for these WPA workers," Harrington declared, "and you can have them and welcome."

2,000,000 Average

WPA officials said the pickup in the work relief roll was a rebound from a reduction in the roll of from 2,350,501 workers on June 28 to 1,660,557 on September 6. The cut was due in large part to Congressional requirement that persons on the rolls for 18 months be dropped.

Congress appropriated $1,477,000,000 for the WPA for this fiscal year, and Harrington has estimated it will keep an average of about 2,000,000 persons on the roll throughout the year. There are about 10,000,000 persons unemployed and on WPA rolls available to private industry, he said.

Miss Perkins said that, from the middle of July to the middle of October, more than 700,000 wage earners found employment in factories. Of the total gain, she declared, less than 300,000 may be attributed to the customary seasonal expansion.

"Preliminary reports for October," she declared, "indicated that increases in manufacturing activity were widespread. Among the industries of major importance in which substantial gains in employment were reported were iron and steel, cotton goods, woolen goods, meat packing plants and electrical machinery and equipment. Decreases except in canning were

Colpoys Says He Resigned Political Post

Anticipated Murphy Ruling on Hatch Act, U. S. Marshal Reveals

John B. Colpoys, United States marshal, yesterday advised the Justice Department that he had anticipated Attorney General Murphy's ruling under the Hatch act and had resigned as chairman of the Democratic central committee for the District on August 3. He has held the political post for 22 years.

While asserting that he had quit his political post the day after the Hatch act became law, Colpoys did not explain why he had not disclosed the fact until after he received a circular from the Justice Department.

"I'm not saying a thing about it," he told newspapermen.

Cognizant of Inhibitions

Colpoys, in a letter to Edward G. Kemp, assistant to the Attorney General, said that he had submitted his resignation to Malcolm S. McConine, Democratic National Committeeman for the District.

"I was fully cognizant of the inhibitions contained in this act respecting political activities of the United States marshals, as I made a study of the act prior to its passage and the signing of the same by the President," he wrote.

He consequently sent his resignation promptly because "I saw no loophole in the act which I could (if I were so disposed) circumvent."

Duties Were Slight

Colpoys explained that the duties of his political job were slight. The only activity of the Democratic committee, he said, occurs during the Presidential election years, when it meets at least 90 days prior to the Democratic National Convention to arrange for primaries to elect delegates to the convention and members of the Democratic National Committee.

"Being without voting privileges in the District," he said, "there is no necessity for political activity."

It was only in election years, the marshal added, "that I devoted any time to political matters, as I could not afford to do otherwise.

"While I hold the office of United States marshal I shall continue, as I have in the past, to devote my time and thought to same, as the work of this office is sufficient for one man's attention."

1941 Defense Costs to Pass 2 Billions

New Year's Navy Estimates Aggregate Nearly $1,000,000,000

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Chairman Scrugham, of the House Naval Appropriations subcommittee, said yesterday that next year's Navy budget estimates, now being whipped into final shape by Administration officials, would run just short of $1,000,000,000.

His statement, other informed sources declared, means that the total national defense budget for next year would run above $2,000,000,000. Expansion of Army personnel and equipment already authorized will run the next War Department appropriation bill in excess of $1,000,000,000, fiscal authorities said.

Preliminary estimates furnished the House Appropriations Committee indicate the Navy budget would range from $900,000,000 and $1,000,000,000, Scrugham said, and according to his understanding they do not include funds for laying down any additional battleships. Heavy expenditures for the eight already underway, and for construction of cruisers, destroyers, planes and other projects for the expanded Navy account for the record-breaking total, he said.

More Men Increase Costs

The sharp boost expected in next year's Army budget is mainly the result of the enlargement of man power voted by Congress last session and then augmented by Presidential action last month. The total War Department military appropriations for the current year—$731,187,871—provide for a gradual increase from 165,000 to 210,000 men. President Roosevelt, under limited emergency powers, has raised this objective to 227,000. At the same time, he authorized expansion of the National Guard from 190,000 to 235,000 men.

The full effect of these increases will not be felt until next year, when all will be in service the whole 12 months. Appropriations for pay, subsistence and clothing of men make up from a third to a half of the annual cost of the Army. In addition, $110,000,000 of the new equipment ordered under the emergency defense program approved last year, will have to be paid for out of next year's bill.

Authoritative sources estimate the deficiency appropriations required by the expansion of the Army and Navy ordered by the President last month would run close to $300,000,000, if new weapons as well as pay, housing and clothing are to be provided for the new men. This includes the cost of fitting out and operating the 40 laid up destroyers pressed into service with the neutrality patrol.

New Shipyards Held Necessary

Further defense measures contemplated in Administration circles but not yet officially proposed would run the bill still higher. These include the enlargement of the Regular Army to 280,000 men and the National Guard to 320,000 men, weapons and equipment for this force, calling in reserve officers to command some of the additional troops and augmentation of the 5,500-plane air force now building by 500 large—and costly—bombers.

Members of the Congressional naval committees expect the Navy to concentrate next year on additional air and ship bases rather than going beyon the 10-year ship construction program launched last year. Practically all shipways are now filled, they point out, a fact which makes a "two-ocean navy" difficult of accomplishment. New shipyards would have to be constructed before any large number of additional warships could be laid down.

Debate Is Sped By Garner as Senate Modifies Shipping Curbs

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer.

Under the staccato snap of Vice President Garner's gavel, the Senate yesterday raced through most of the Administration's neutrality bill, but slowed up as it neared the controversial heart—embargo repeal.

A series of modifying amendments, easing drastic "title" transfer provisions and authorizing American vessels to move to all corners of the globe except to actual belligerents in Europe or the north Atlantic Canadian coast, were swept into the bill.

Clearing the way for fast progress was a "gentlemen's agreement" between Administration and isolationist forces, a self-imposed limitation on debate, and the ever-alert Vice President.

Action Likely Tomorrow

Cheered by the rapid action, after 17 days of Senate speech-making, Majority Leader Barkley said final passage today was "possible," but action tomorrow more likely. Minority Leader McNary said he thought a vote tomorrow is assured.

A charge that the nimble John Garner was "railroading" the bill brought a retort from the Vice President that the Senate was indulging in "horse and buggy" tactics.

The charge was hurled by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, an isolationist leader and close friend of Garner, after Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, vainly sought recognition to speak on an amendment.

Withdraws Remark

"I don't believe the business of the Senate will be expedited by trying to railroad this legislation," snapped Clark.

"The chair is not trying to railroad it, but there is not going to be any horse and buggy business about this, either," shot back Garner.

Garner withdrew his remark from the record. But before the day ended he slapped at Senate procedure again by announcing he would rule when the occasion arose "that a day is 24 hours." By daily recesses, the Senate technically continues on the same "legislative day" for weeks, and its calendar yesterday read "October 4."

Nye Replies to Minton

Before the Senate knuckled down to action on the bill, Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, replied to a "personal" attack on him in the Senate Monday by Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana.

Nye referred to Minton's statement that he accepted fees for lectures on the munitions industry, and said it was the first time the Senate neutrality debate had dropped to a "personal level" and he would not reply on that plane.

Nye said he had no apology for accepting fees for lectures, as other Senators "have done this for generations," but he said he made more

The names of Government employes who are members of the Washington branch of the American League for Peace and Democracy will be made public today, the Dies Committee decided yesterday at an executive session.

The league, characterized by Chairman Dies as "a Communist organization," has about 700 members on the Federal pay roll in Washington. Of these, it is understood that more than 100 receive salaries ranging from $3,500 to $10,000 per annum.

The Post was informed last night that in a statement accompanying the release of names, the committee would point out that it knows of no league member in the Government who actually is a Communist, but

Von Ribbentrop Says Britain Is Playing With Fate of Empire

By Alvin J. Steinkopf
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Danzig, Oct. 24.—Germany is determined to fight Britain to the bitter end and is supremely confident of victory, Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop told the world tonight.

In a 90-minute address he warned Britain that by continuing the war she was "playing dangerously with the fate of her empire."

"The present British government may go down in history as the gravedigger of the empire," he told a group of veteran Nazi fighters which formed his immediate audience in this one-time free city, now incorporated in the Reich.

The Nazi foreign minister let fall not a single hint of a possible compromise to end the war before the conflict at arms goes to its bitter conclusion.

Fuehrer Guarantees Victory

"Chamberlain refused the hand of the Fuehrer stretched out in a gesture of peace," he shouted at the climax of his address.

"Now the German people takes up the challenge. The German people is ready and is determined to fight until the security of the German people is assured for all time.

"The German people is a solid block, defended by its army, air force and navy which have just won bright laurels. The German people now will fight this war to the end.

"That this end will be a great German victory is guaranteed by the Fuehrer."

Colonies Are Only Demand

"Germany has no more demands against England and France except the return of her former colonial possessions."

But in her determination to bring about a new era in eastern Europe, including calling home her minorities, Germany will brook interference from no quarter, he warned.

Von Ribbentrop, making one of his rare public addresses, spoke with less fire than the better known Nazi orators.

He spoke with great earnestness and care, however, giving a detailed definition of Germany's present attitude toward the war.

That attitude, he emphasized repeatedly, is that Germany makes no retreat from the last stand taken by Adolf Hitler in his Reichstag speech of October 6, and that the war goes on to the destruction of the British Empire if necessary.

He uttered again the frequent Nazi assertion that Germany has sympathy for the position of France, which Germans say was dragged into the conflict by Britain.

Respects Monroe Doctrine

Von Ribbentrop also asserted with great emphasis that no cause exists for conflict between Germany and the United States.

"Only diseased phantasy could even conceive of a question which could bring about trouble between these states," he asserted. "Germany wants only extensive trade on the American continent and it always respected the Monroe doctrine.

"There is a greater possibility that England will come into conflict with the Monroe Doctrine because of her special interests on account of her possessions, fleet bases and coaling

Russia to Sell Nazis 1,000,000 Tons of Food

Signing of Trade Pact With Swiss Also Announced

By International News Service

Berlin, Oct. 24.—Arrangements for transportation of 1,000,000 tons of Russian foodstuffs to Germany were being completed tonight, following signing of an agreement between Soviet and German trade representatives in Moscow.

Another important step in Germany's efforts to counteract the British blockade was announced tonight in the signing of a nazi-Swiss trade agreement at Berne. The announcement did not reveal the extent of this pact or the articles covered by it.

Soviet-Nazi negotiations for further supplies to the Reich are continuing in Moscok, it was disclosed. Announcement of additional purchases of Russian foodstuffs is expected soon.

The 1,000,000-ton purchase negotiated today consists of cereals and fodder. The cereals will supply vital bread and other foodstuffs for the German population; the fodder will be used to supplement the feed of live stock, eventually destined as food.

Delivery of the huge food purchase will begin in the next few days and is expected to be completed within two months.

Facts on Seizure Awaited Here; Whereabouts of Crew Uncertain

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt expressed the hope yesterday that Russia would release the American freighter City of Flint, which was seized by a German cruiser and sailed to Murmansk under the Nazi swastika by a prize crew.

There was every indication that the United States Government would demand that Russia release the City of Flint, if that should become necessary.

The President, at his press conference, said the American Ambassador to Russia, Lawrence A. Steinhardt, had reported that Russian officials in Moscow did not yet know the facts in connection with seizure of the City of Flint. Nothing could be done, he said, until the facts have been ascertained.

The President said this Government did not yet know the whereabouts of Capt. Joseph A. Gainard and the 40 members of the crew of the City of Flint.

Crew Aboard at Tromso

However, dispatches from Tromso, Norway, said the officers and crew were still aboard the City of Flint when the freighter left there Saturday for Murmansk in charge of 18 sailors from the German cruiser Emden.

Secretary of State Hull pointed out yesterday that ordinarily a belligerent nation seizing a ship with contraband would take the vessel into one of its own ports and there subject it to prize court proceedings.

In the case of the City of Flint, Mr. Hull observed, this wasn't done, the freighter being taken into a neutral port.

Early Release Predicted

Under these circumstances, observers took it for granted that the United States would ask Soviet Russia to give the ship back to its owner, the United States Maritime Commission.

The International News Service correspondent in Moscow said that early release of the City of Flint was indicated in "authoritative Moscow circles," adding that the U. S. S. R. will not permit Germany to take control of the 5,000-ton freighter in a Russian port.

Rescues 38 Off Freighter

The drama of the Flint's capture was heightened by news from Tromso that 24 hours before her capture by the Emden, she had picked up from lifeboats 38 survivors of the British freighter Stonegate. The Britishers said the Stonegate had been torpedoed a week before. They were on the point of exhaustion when the City of Flint picked them up.

The Emden, namesake of a World War raider that scourged British shipping in the Pacific, must have run down the City of Flint in waters believed to be thoroughly patrolled by the British royal navy.

British Sailors Landed

When the City of Flint, in charge of her boarding party from the Emden, reached Tromso, according to an Associated Press dispatch from there, the Nazi commander asked and received permission of the Norwegian government to land the 38 Stonegate survivors. He classified them as prisoners of war.

Then, having taken on water and escorted by a Norwegian destroyer to the 3-mile limit, the City of Flint started on her voyage to Russia.

President Roosevelt was asked at his press conference whether he had authority under existing laws to

Queen Mary and Normandie To Be Sabotaged, Navy Told

New York Doubles Police Guard Over Two Luxury Liners; Naval Intelligence Officer Inspects Ships, Detectives Called

Copyright by New York Times.

New York, Oct. 24.—The Queen Mary and the Normandie, largest, fastest and most luxurious liners of the British and French merchant fleet, will be sabotaged within the next few days, according to information reported to be in the possession of the United States Naval Intelligence Department.

The report was taken so seriously by the New York Police Department that the guard over the two boats, which have been berthed at Hudson River piers since the outbreak of the European war, was doubled following a visit to them by all high ranking officers of the department.

No information in the matter would be given out at the headquarters of the Third Naval District. At police headquarters it was said that a confidential report had been made and that the only information to be given out was that the report of the planned sabotage had been given the department by the Cunard-White Star Line, operators of the Queen Mary.

Police officers who visited the vessels reported that an intelligence officer of the Navy visited the ships early in the day and said the Navy had information that one of the vessels would be sabotaged.

The Queen Mary and the Normandie are docked opposite each other, the Queen Mary in war gray on the south side of Pier 90 at Fiftieth street and the Normandie, painted its normal black and white, on the north side of Pier 85 at Forty-eighth street.

Members of the newly formed sabotage squad, the dock squad, the alien squad, the marine division and emergency service of the department conferred with ship and line officials aboard the vessels.

At least one more sergeant and 10 uniformed patrolmen were added to the sergeant and 15 men assigned to the piers and two police launches covering river approaches to the vessels were instructed to be on constant guard.

Russian Demands on Finland Reported Altered, Talks Halted

By A. Marcus Tollet
Copyright by New York Times.

Helsinki, Oct. 24.—The unexpected break in the resumed Finno-Russian talks at Moscow after only 36 hours to allow the head of the Finnish delegation, Juho Kusti Paasikivi, and Finance Minister V. A. Tanner, to get fresh instructions, heightened the tension in his capital today, although it was announced by a foreign office spokesman that there was no occasion for any alarm.

No new demands have been received from the Soviet Union, but it is understood the Soviet leaders suggested "adjustments" of their original proposals, which necessitated consultation with the Finnish government.

Paasikivi and Tanner are expected Thursday morning, while other members of the Finnish delegation remain in Moscow to discuss minor technical points.

No indication has yet been given as to when they will return to Moscow, but it seems unlikely that negotiations will be resumed until early next week. It is understood here that the Soviet leaders have shown no desire to hasten affairs, and this is regarded as a reassuring sign.

While the foreign ministry refuses to divulge the character of the new

Roosevelt Shows Farmers How to Weed Out Meter Costs

President Roosevelt proudly exhibited at his press conference yesterday a simple and economical electric current meter which, he said, could be installed in farm homes at half the cost of the meter heretofore in use.

The press conference was over, and reporters were starting to move out of the room, when the President, holding up the gadget, said they had forgotten to ask any questions about it, though it had been in plain sight.

The meter, no bigger than the average rubber stamp, is built on the principle of the old bicycle cyclometer, Mr. Roosevelt remarked. It is the simplest thing imaginable, he declared.

The fact that he had it, he said, shows the effect of cooperation between Government and private producing and distributing power systems. The Rural Electrification Administration, he declared, obtained the idea from the Ontario Hydro-Electric Co.

Another thing the Administration is working on, he said, is an arrangement whereby the honest farmer will be allowed to read his own meter each month.

Under this plan the farmer's meter would only be inspected every six months instead of every month. The upshot would be that the cost of meter readings and mailing out bills would be reduced from an average of 15 cents to 3 cents per month.

Now that Elliott Roosevelt's career as a radio commentator (strangely enough) bumps into the ruling aimed at Coughlin, against opinion on paid, sponsored programs, what are the chances that he'll become a columnist like his Ma?

Young and pretty Mrs. Justice Douglas has played badminton once or twice in the attic of the Supreme Court. But it creates too much of a stir among the court attaches; they cluck like the ducks in Rock Creek when alarmed.

Lately Mrs. Roosevelt has received more letters about Clarence Streit's "Union Now" (U. S. wedded with 15 other democracies) than about any other book. (Wonder if FDR wishes she wouldn't trifle with such new fangled notions.)

Tourists who return from Germany, and even seasoned correspondents and radio pundits, are so surprised when they don't get cuffed, slapped and kicked by the Nazis that they're pathetically grateful. They forget that the average non-Nazi German is the kindliest of souls.

"—when the Cabinet whispers"

Maybe this is the silly season for rumors, but it's whispered that a Republican is being considered for a Cabinet vacancy. (Remember the Republicans, in high starched collars?) Col. Knox is the one oftenest mentioned. Everyone is incredulous.

To some idealists around the Capital it sounds like a swell idea until they think of the awkward situation when Prexy and his Cabinet might want to discuss some political secrets and stratagems.

An unresponsive witness equipped with a little low animal cunning can (like Fritz Kuhn) turn a Congressional hearing into a farce. Maybe Congressman Dies will send one of 'em to jail for a few days when they get too obstreperous.

Maybe that's because one look at Lincoln reveals more than the landscape seen from 555 feet in the air.

Well, there happens to be two of 'em: Jerry Voorhis, of California, a liberal Democrat, and John Vorhys, of Ohio, a Republican. (Some think Jerry Voorhis was the original of Senator Jeff Smith in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington.")

"—by 1959, submarine liners?"

If Simon Lake, inventor of the submarine, is right, England may have a fleet of giant undersea freighters, passenger boats and warships by the war of 1959. They could, if necessary, be convoyed by smaller submarines. He says they're feasible, alright.

Gossip in the House Restaurant has it that the Dies committee really despaired of eliciting any information from the defiant, recalcitrant Fritz Kuhn. But he was recalled as a witness because that might win votes for a continuation of the committee for another year, from members who thought the Fascist agitators were being neglected.

What a team of campaigners Dolly Gann and Alice Longworth would make if the GOP chieftains could induce 'em to take the stump in 1940!

public speeches without charge than he did for fees, and his limited means required this income.

Refers to 2% Clubs

"I, unlike many other Senators, am without the backing of a political machine," said Nye. "I have no support from 2 per cent clubs that assess public officials."

He referred to the "2 per cent clubs" among Indiana State officials, which Senator Minton formerly defended in the Senate.

A succession of amendments adopted by the Senate eased the bill's American shipping restrictions beyond modifications made in the compromise version already drafted by a majority of Senate Foreign Relations Committee Democrats, and removed the requirement that title be transferred before American ships can move goods to a belligerent purchaser. The title transfer requirement was continued on all foreign shipping of American goods to belligerents.

Under the bill, American ships may not transport arms to even outlying belligerent possessions.

Rapidly approved were the following amendments:

By Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan—That normal inland commerce with Canada and Mexico be continued without purchasers in those countries having to obtain title to goods before they are shipped across their borders.

By Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas—That ordinary cargoes shipped in American vessels also be exempted from the general requirement that American citizens divest themselves of title to commodities purchased by combatant purchasers.

By Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York—That American ships as well as airplanes be permitted to trade with Bermuda; accomplished by substituting 35 degrees north latitude for the arbitrary 30-degree line above which the bill would prohibit North Atlantic trade with belligerents.

Lodge Restrictions

By Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts—That American ships also be permitted to trade with those portions of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick (such as Yarmouth), on the Bay of Fundy, but not call at any strictly ocean ports (such as Halifax) west of 66 degrees west longitude.

By Senator White (Republican), of Maine—That the Tasman Sea, between Australia and New Zealand, be specifically listed along with other waters adjacent to the Pacific (Indian Ocean, China and Arabian seas and Bay of Bengal), for American ship trade with belligerent possessions.

Trade With Africa

By Senator Connally—That American vessels be permitted to use the South Atlantic, south of 30 degrees north latitude, to trade with South Africa (principally Capetown).

By Pittman—That cash or its equivalent be required in sales to belligerent governments, eliminating Presidential discretion to extend 90-day commercial credits to warring countries. A later amendment also prohibited private credit for arms sales to private concerns in belligerent countries.

Three other independent efforts to amend the bill went down to defeat on record votes.

Defeated Amendments

The defeated amendments included:

An effort by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, to draw a 300-mile mandatory "combat zone" around Europe, prohibiting American ships to call at either neutral or belligerent ports therein—beaten 71 to 18. The bill already prohibits American ship calls at European belligerent ports, but "combat zone" restrictions affecting neutral nations as well would be left to the President.

An attempt by Senator Danaher to prohibit sale of airplanes or parts manufactured in the United States to belligerents until this country's own 3,000-plane military aircraft program has been filled—defeated 62 to 24.

A proposal by Senator Clark, of Missouri, to add two Senators and two members of the House to the National Munitions Board Control (now comprising Secretaries of State, Treasury, War, Navy and Commerce)—defeated 45 to 41.

Another Test Seen

The Clark amendment, opposed by Administration leaders as a "legislative encroachment on administrative functions," may go to another test, due to the closeness of the vote. Barkley and Connally sought to clinch its defeat by swift moves to reconsider the count and to table, but "vacated" their action when protests were heard from Senator McNary and Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho.

Mgr. Ryan Urges Repeal Of Embargo

Catholic Leader Cites Moral Demand Nations Must Face

Repeal of the embargo would not only be consistent with America's national welfare and safety, but would also be in conformity with the precepts of morality and religion, Msgr. John A. Ryan declared last night, broadcasting via WJSV over the Columbia network. He pointed out that he was speaking only for himself, "as an American citizen who believes that he knows something about the principels of international morality."

Mgr. Ryan, director of the social action department, National Catholic Welfare Conference, asserted that "in the present crisis our country is morally obliged to do all that it reasonably can to defeat Hitler and destroy Hitlerism." He warned that victory for Hitler, whom he described as an "evil genius," would mean the "destruction of Christian civilization" through a large part of Europe.

Attacks Isolationists

The noted ecclesiastic charged that isolationists seeking to retain the embargo were not only advocating political isolation, but moral isolation as well.

"They (embargo advocates) contend the injustice inflicted by the Hitler government upon the peoples of Poland, Germany and Austria, and the manifold injustices which it will perpetrate over wider areas if it is successful in this war, are no moral concern of ours," Mgr. Ryan said. "They remind us unpleasantly of Cain, who scornfully asked, 'Am I my brother's keeper?'

"The person who asserts that we should be impartial and indifferent in our attitude toward the conflict between the Hitler government and the Allies repudiates not only Christ's gospel of brotherly love, but the principles of natural morality."

Impartiality Held Impossible

Mgr. Ryan insisted that no genuine believer in Christianity or in the moral law could be neutral, or impartial, or indifferent "in this awful situation." No intelligent man, he added, who holds that states as well as individuals have duties of charity to one another will deny that the United States is under moral obligation to do all that it reasonably can, and that it is "morally obliged to use every means short of war to prevent the moral, spiritual, and economic devastation that would follow the triumph of Hitlerism."

"To permit the sale of munitions and other materials under a 'cash and carry' system," the monsignor said, "would not cause us unreasonable inconvenience or grave risk. On the contrary, it would help keep us out of the war.

"Supplying Great Britain and France with munitions would enable them to win a speedier victory and to make the war shorter. The shorter the war the less likely are we to be drawn into it."

The Gallup Poll

U. S. to Stay Out of War, Bare Majority Says; Fewer Voters Think We'll Be Drawn In

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 24.—A sharp decrease in the number of American voters who think the United States will be drawn into war has shown itself in American Institute of Public Opinion surveys since the war began.

Whether the United States will or will not get into the war is, of course, a question which is in the realm of pure speculation. Two weeks before the war broke out an Institute survey found a large majority believing that the United States would be drawn into a war if it came. Today opinion is more evenly divided, with a small majority saying they think the country will avoid armed participation in the present war.

GEORGE GALLUP

The question on which a cross-section of voters throughout the country were asked to express their views read as follows:

"Do you think the United States will go into the war in Europe, or do you think we will stay out of the war?"

Those who expressed an opinion divided as follows:

Will go in 46%
Will stay out 54

Approximately one voter in every eight (13 per cent) expressed no opinion.

The fact that before the war a majority the United States would be involved, whereas today there is a tendency to believe it can stay out, may have several explanations. First, two months ago most voters throught of the next war in terms of the last, or, in other words, a "war in earnes.t" The first six weeks of the present war, however, with its cautious and perfunctory fighting and the absence of bombardments on open cities in France and England during that period, have apparently caused a reduction in fear of immediate American involvement.

Second, the voters themselves, and many experts, apparently underestimated two months ago the intensity of desire throughout the country to avoid getting into war Since the outbreak of hostilities this intensity has manifested itself in many surveys by the American Institute, in letters to Congress, and in other ways.

Third, President Roosevelt has September solemnly assured the on repeated occasions since early country that the United States is not going to join the conflict. These pronouncements may have had a quieting effect.

Voters in New England and the Southern States and in the Far West, the survey found, are the least convinced that America will stay out. Throughout the Middle Atlantic States and the central inland area of the country, a slight majority think the Nation can remain isolated from the conflict.

	U. S. Will Go In	U. S. Will Stay Out
New England	50%	50%
Middle Atlantic	41	59
East Central	45	55
West Central	49	51
South	50	50
Far West	51	49

Asked why they thought the United States would stay out of the war, those interviewed in the Institute survey gave these chief reasons:

Overwhelming opposition of the people to war.

America learned its lesson last time.

The United States would have everything to lose and nothing to gain

A few added that they thought the war would end quickly, thus making it unnecessary for the Nation to decide, and that President Roosevelt would keep us out if the war did last.

Those who, on the other hand, think the United States will go into the war say, briefly, that America will be "dragged in by forces we can't control," and add "it's impossible in this modern world to keep isolated." A second reason named is America's "great sympathy for England and France." A small number of voters said they thought repeal of the arms embargo will get us in, while another small group said we would be drawn in by "propaganda."

Browder Jury Quizzes His Bondswoman

Society Woman Kept More Than an Hour; Tourist Records Called

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 24.—As Communist leader Earl Browder emerged today from a Federal detention cell under $7,500 bail supplied by a society matron, he shrugged off questions as to whether a man in a similar position in Russia might expect release in bond.

To this and other inquiries touching upon his ideology—such as whether "anyone was ever acquitted" in a comparable case in Russia—he had for reply only a thin smile and the remark:

"I won't enter into any political discussions right here."

As to his experiences as an overnight prisoner—he was indicted yesterday of obtaining a passport through false representations—he was not much more communicative.

Jury Quizzes Bondswoman

"I can't qualify as an expert on prisons—yet," he said. "At any rate I have no criticism or anything whatever to say adversely about underlings. It is the big men who boss the job whose methods we are after."

The woman who put up bond for him—Mrs. Hester T. Huntington, who is listed in the Social Register—was taken before the same grand jury that indicted Browder and remained there for more than an hour.

She had said she was aiding Browder simply "as a matter of principle," and had declined to discuss her own political views, volunteering:

"You know I'm making a speech this afternoon in room 1514" (the grand jury room).

Mrs. Huntington, statuesque, with graying hair, was divorced from Ellery Huntington, Wall Street lawyer, in 1929.

When it was suggested she might be branded as a Red and a Parlor Pink" for aiding Browder, she replied pleasantly: "Yes, but that is the price one must pay. There is a lot more to this than you know."

Tourist Records Subpenaed.

She made it clear, however, she did not know Browder personally. A mutual friend introduced them today in the office of United States Marshall John J. Kelly.

Her counsel denounced the subpena as "something which tends to discourage earnest, decent people from putting up bail for radical defendants."

Almost at the same time she went before the jury, two attorneys for World Tourists, Inc., which advertises tours through Russia, appeared at the courthouse in a taxicab loaded with subpenaed records, which then were put on hand trucks and pushed into the grand jury room.

This was another in a series of indications that the Government's investigation would extend beyond activities of Browder himself.

Calls It War Hysteria

Subsequently, in a formal statement, Browder asserted the proceedings against him were "obviously a part and product of the manufactured war hysteria . . .

"It has objects far broader than the Communists. Thsi was dramatically demonstrated by the Republican Party National Committee intervention. Unable to make any case against the Communist Party program and activities . . . they had adopted a policy of harrassment . . .

"The legal absurdity of the proceedings is revealed by the fact that even the reactionary Hoover regime, which had this alleged case when it was fresh ten years ago, decided there were no grounds for prosecution."

Roller Skater, 66, Glides In To Show Roosevelt's His Art

Besides Tap Dancing, Ex-Horse Car Operator Does 'Sonja Henie Pose' And 'Shooting the Duck' Like a Russian

James W. Campbell, 66, who has homesteaded in Alberta, driven horsecars in Winnipeg, and built houses in Chicago, arrived in Washington yesterday to demonstrate his skating ability to President Roosevelt.

Busted by the depression, Campbell said he took up roller skating as a profession "so I could have some fun."

"I'm starting life as a boy of 66," he laughed, "and I wanted to skate for the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, or the children at the Warm Springs Foundation."

Among his favorite skating stunts, besides tap dancing, are the "Sonja Henie pose" and "shooting a duck" like a Russian dancer, Campbell explained.

While in the building business in Chicago, he continued, "I made a lot of money, but I never had fun—didn't have time."

His advice to young men, he emphasized, "would be to have a little fun along the way and not work so hard you can't enjoy life."

During his skating routine, Campbell said he liked to accompany himself by singing cowboy and Spanish songs.

"I like the air of those smooth flowing pieces," he remarked, "and only sing the refrain."

He wears a cowboy outfit complete with holster during his appearances, but doesn't carry a pistol, "because the police don't like it," Campbell stated.

"Sometimes, I use a toy gun, instead," he admitted.

Although he's traveled all over the United States and western Canada, he believes he's just getting into his stride.

"Anything a boy can do, I can do," he proclaimed.

Soviet Code Book Lost on Boat, 2 Say, Asking $500,000

Philadelphia, Oct. 24 (AP).—Loss of a Soviet "official secret code book" valued at $500,000 was claimed in a suit filed in United States District Court today by two immigrants from Russia.

Asking damages of the Cunard White Star Steamship Line, Vladimir Azarov and his wife said the code book and other valuables were lost in the sinking of a boat in the harbor of Riga, Latvia, last spring.

British Deride Ribbentrop's 'Clumsy Effort'

Hold Speech Couldn't Be Designed 'to Fool Anyone but Germans'

By Raymond Daniell.

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Oct. 24.—The immediate British recation to German Foreign Minister Bon Ribbentrop's Danzig speech tonight was that it was designed for home consumption.

Such clumsy efforts to mislead listeners, according to official foreign office views, could not be designed to feel anybody but the Germans. Even they would be immune to attempts to shift the blame for the war to Great Britain if the Nazi blackout of information had not made the Allied documents on the events leading to the conflict "verboten" in th eReich, according to the official view here.

Von Ribbentrop was said to have slammed the door on any further attempts at mediation, at least in the near future, by his assertion that "The German people are now determined to wage this war forced upon them by the British warinciters and not lay down their arms before the security of the German Reich in Europe is guaranteed."

Chamberlain to Answer

Prime Minister Chamberlain is expected to answer von Ribbentrop in his weekly war bulletin before the House of Commons Thursday, because the Nazi foreign minister attacked the Prime Minister personally, accusing him of a series of braken promises and a long-standing personal "plot" to crush the German nation.

The ministry of information issued an official statement reflecting the foreign office views.

"The speech of Ribbentrop introduces no new element into the situation nor is it considered to have any great importance. . . . Yet once more the same clumsy attempts were made to divide Great Britain from France, the same stupid falsehoods about aggressive intentions of Great Britain. . . .

"Great Britain and France then, it may be said, contemplate this latest effusion from Germany unmoved. . . . It is evident from the speech tonight that Von Ribbentrop is still far from comprehending it (heir standpoint) and both countries will, therefore, continue on the course which they have set themselves until the attitude of the German government undergoes a change."

French Deny Chance of Rift

Paris, Oct. 24 (U.P.)—French officials tonight assailed what they called the "specious attempts" by German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop to drive a wedge in the British-French alliance.

The Allies will stand together in the war against Germany until "Hitlerism is vanquished," it was announced.

Government quarters said that Ribbentrop's speech, while containing no new peace offer, sought to justify continuation of the war on the grounds that the Reich cannot lay down her arms until it is certain that German security no longer is endangered.

"But this statement is unacceptable because nobody menaced Germany's security whereas Germany attacked and destroyed the independence of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland," it was stated.

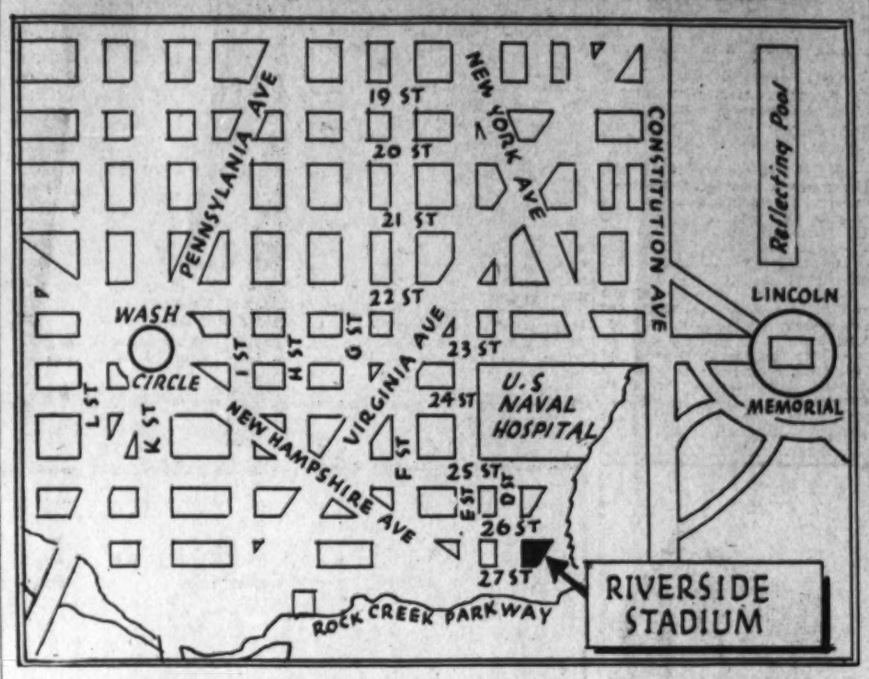
Italy Repelled by Talk

Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Oct. 24.—Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop's speech, like Fuehrer Hitler's before the Reichstag, has served to convince Italians that there are no hopes of stopping this war, and that they had better keep out of it even more rigidly than before.

They could hear over the radio that, when the speaker praised Italo-German friendship and personal relations between Hitler and Premier Mussolini, no one in the audience cheered, but when Russia was mentioned, the whole crowd applauded long and loudly. Thus, they have been shown again that the Berlin-Moscow Axis means more to Germany at present than the Berlin-Rome Axis.

Salesmen Report Success at Auto Show; Visitors Offered Numerous Side Attractions



If you've wondered where Riverside Stadium is, look at this. The map shows exact location of the stadium, where the 1940 auto show is in progress. The show is under cover and there is ample free parking space

Notwithstanding the sideshow attractions—jitterbug jamborees, a beauty contest and a visiting movie star—automobiles are still holding the center of the stage at the Auto Show.

Visitors are not only focusing their attention upon the glistening new models, but the percentage of buyers is larger than usual, according to demonstrators.

"We've taken seven orders already," one volunteered enthusiastically. His exhibit, incidentally, was of one of the larger and costlier makes, indicating that the long wheelbase job still has its partisans in spite of parking problems.

A salesman for one of the medium-price cars was pleased to admit, upon being questioned, that in less than a dozen hours' work on the floor he has taken two orders.

Trailer business is comparably good, according to exhibitors.

The large percentage of buyers was the first thing noted by Dick Murphy, manager of the Auto Show, when he was asked to give his impressions.

"Naturally, we're very much pleased," said Murphy, who then went on to describe some of the auxiliary events scheduled for the remainder of the week.

Tomorrow, Friday and Saturday, both afternoons and evenings, jitterbug contests will be staged in Riverside indoor stadium, Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest, where the twentieth annual auto show is being held. Henry C. Stephenson, jr., is making arrangements for the swing tournament.

Highlights of last night's entertainment were a platform parade of candidates for the title of Auto Show Queen and an antiaircraft demonstration by the District National Guard. It was announced that Miss Margaret Rosalee Hackett continues to hold her lead in the balloting for queen.

Miss Hackett has polled 4,855 votes; Miss Jeanette Clawson, 2,675; Miss Sylvia Abramson, 1,895; Miss Ruth Brown, 1,595; Miss Ellen L. Cooper, 1,575, and Miss Catherine Berberich, 1,450.

Ann Rutherford, film actress, making personal appearance here, was among yesterday's visitors.

The show, which closes Saturday, is open daily from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m.

U. S. to Ask Soviet to Free City of Flint

ban American ships from danger zones. He replied that he had not.

Early Gives Attitude

Some time before this, Stephen Early, White House secretary, had commented on this and other points involved in the City of Flint case. He said the situation divided itself into three parts in the White House view:

1. The City of Flint was on a perfectly legal and lawful voyage under existing American laws.

2. Under the neutrality act requested of Congress, she could not have sailed on that voyage to a belligerent port.

3. The State Department has sent cablegrams asking its representatives at various points (Moscow, Berlin and Oslo, among them) to develop the facts and report. The reports are being awaited.

The ship seizure brought reverberations in the Senate, scene of a fight over the neutrality bill and its provisions to lift the embargo on arms. The bill contains a provision authorizing the President to designate combat zones through which American vessels could not ply.

Taft Challenges Sailing

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, a Presidential candidate, asked why the President allowed the Government-owned City of Flint to enter European combat zones.

"Where would he get such power?" retorted Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas "I hope the Senator does not entertain such expansive ideas of executive authority if, by some mishap, he becomes President."

Taft said that President Roosevelt's message to Congress indidated he had such authority.

"Regardless of that," shouted Connally, "the present neutrality act permits American ships to go anywhere on he ocean. Under this bill no American ships or cargoes could be routed to a belligerent."

Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, interrupted Connally earlier to charge that Great Britain had seized "American ships three weeks ago and taken them to England to take their cargoes."

"We should have protested seizure of American ships long ago," said Danaher, who is fighting repeal of the arms embargo.

Right of Seizure Undisputed

No American officials disputed the right of Germany under international law to seize the City of Flint, since she was carrying food and other articles listed by the Reich government as contraband of war.

However, none would concede Germany the right to claim ownership of the vessel once her prize crew had taken her into a neutral port. Attention was called to a United States Supreme Court decision which might be summed up thus:

If 50 per cent or more of an American ship's cago consists of contraband and if a belligerent seizes her, the ship may be taken into a port of the belligerent country, but not into a neutral port except under exceptional circumstances such as stress of weather, breakdown of machinery, or lack of provisions.

The Germans had no choice except to take the City of Flint into a neutral port. They could hardly expect to run the British blockade and get through the North Sea to a German port. Thus, even if they should now ask Russia to let them have the ship on the grounds that "exceptional circumstances" caused them to take her into Murmansk, they would have no place to take her.

The Associated Press correspondent in Moscow said the Russians were as surprised as anyone when the City of Flint put into Murmansk flying a German flag, and that they probably were embarrassed by the situation.

Ribbentrop Sees War to Bitter End

stations in the Western Hemisphere," he asserted.

The English reserved attitude toward conclusions of the Panama conference, he added, already indicated the chances of England's challenge to the Monroe Doctrine.

(Britain has said that it would be up to the belligerents to decide whether their warships should operate in the "safety belt" established around the American continents last month by the 21 American republics in their declaration of Panama.)

Address Is "Last Word"

Political quarters tonight were calling Von Ribbentrop's address "Germany's last word" on the war. They regarded it as the answer to Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech of October 12, when he said it would be impossible for Britain to accept any such basis for peace as Hitler proposed "without forfeiting her honor."

Hitler himself did not find it necessary to answer Chamberlain because he felt his attitude had been made as plain as possible in his last Reichstag address. At that time he proclaimed the exclusive German and Soviet Russian right to reshape and reorganize eastern Europe and asserted he had no war aims against Britain and France.

Von Ribbentrop said no more tonight, but he gave sharp emphasis to Hitler's words.

Informed quarters declared Germany's attitude now was clear beyond any question of doubt and that it would be unnecessary to make a new statement of policy for a long time.

A large part of Von Ribbentrop's address consisted of historical background to justify Germany's annexation of Danzig and occupation of Poland.

He said repeated efforts had been made to come to an understanding with Poland and that there were good prospects of an agreement until Britain started the negotiations which resulted in the British guarantee of Polish integrity.

"England was behind it," the foreign minister said.

Then he recalled that the Polish attitude toward Germany stiffened. He charged that abuse of German nationals and actual crossing of the German border by Polish troops made armed intervention an inescapable necessity.

Von Ribbentrop said Britain long planned war against Germany and that it failed to materialize after the Munich conference because British armament was not completed then.

For the first time he disclosed that onl ya few months after Hitler came to power in 1933 a secret meeting was arranged between the Fuehrer and Edouard Daladier, who served as Premier of France for 10 months that year, to iron out French-German differences.

Reviews Offer to Britain

At Britain's instigation, he charged, the meeting was called off at the last minute by the French and Daladier was ousted from the premiership, which he regained in April, 1938.

He said Britain was motivated by a fear that "the French front fighter and man of the people, Daladier, might find a real basis for agreement with front fighter and man of the people Hitler."

From 1933 on, he asserted Hitler's policy pursued a four-fold policy of coming to terms with Britain. These terms he said were:

A naval agreement, an eternal mutual guarantee of the integrity of the borders of Belgium, the Netherlands and France; German respect for Britain's imperial interests and British respect for German interests in eastern Europe; and a protective and defensive British-German alliance.

Under the latter, he said Germany would have pledged armed aid to the British Empire with no such counter aid demanded of England.

The destruction of Germany, he charged, was the essential point of British policy.

He also accused Britain of a long succession of "historical breaches of faith," that she tricked Germany with the 1918 armistice, fooled Italy into a peace pact, betrayed the Arabs to the Jews and refused to pay the United States war debt.

British Deny Propaganda Drive in U. S.

Government Pledges To Keep Americans 'Informed of War'

By Edwin Stout,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

London, Oct. 24.—The British government promised the House of Commons a "constant endeavor to obtain the largest possible measure of publicity" in the United States today while newspaper placards reported the "U. S. A. Angry" over German seizure of the steamship City of Flint.

Sir Edward Grigg, parliamentary secretary to the ministry of information, set forth the government's publicity aims in reply to a question in Commons on the volume of "German propaganda" in America compared with the "shortage of information from British sources."

"I am aware that the demand in the U. S. A. for information regarding our war effort and purpose is still to a considerable extent unsatisfied," declared Sir Edward.

Open Door to Reporters

"It is not the policy of the ministry of information to engage in what are called propaganda activities in the U. S. A., but every effort is being made to give American correspondents the fullest opportunity of studying and assessing our war activities.

For the presentation of the British case in the U. S. A. the ministry rely principally upon straightforward information; and although my noble friend (Information Minister Lord MacMillan) is no longer himself responsible for the supply of news from government sources, it will be his constant endeavor to secure the largest possible measure of publicity in the U. S. A. for such news as may be released by the departments concerned and for other information concerning the British war effort."

George Ridley, Laborite, had asked whether the minister of information "is aware that opinion in the United States of America is not adequately informed, through the medium of the American press, about the British war effort and purpose because of an absence of information from this country; whether he is aware of the volume of German propaganda circulated through the same medium; and what steps is he taking to correct the unsatisfactory state of affairs."

Ship Seizure Called Blunder

In the House of Lords, Undersecretary of War Lord Cobham announced that Britain had captured 110 German seamen and airmen as compared with only a "handful" of British airmen captured by Germany.

London newspaper headlines on the City of Flint seizure reported "Anger in the U. S. A." and "America Angry—Nazi Blunder."

In line with attempts to develop friendliness between the United States and Britain, the United States has received an unusually enthusiastic press in England lately.

Debate on neutrality legislation is followed closely.

One example of British press treatment was the way in which newspapers lyrically described the rescue of passengers of the British liners Yorkshire and City of Mandalay by the American steamer Independence Hall.

Vanished from the daily press now are traces of the attitude of some isolationist and high tariff journals which, in depression days, pictured Uncle Sam as a Shylock snarling over his unpaid notes.

Westerners Oppose New Trade Pacts

Reciprocal Treaty Power to Be Fought If U. S. Hit, They Say

By the Associated Press

Representatives of 11 western States were reported yesterday by Representative Robinson (Democrat), Utah, to have pledged themselves to seek repeal or modification of the Administration's reciprocal trade program if tariff reductions on agricultural and mining products resulted from impending agreements with three South American countries.

"You may say for us that we were unanimous on that score," said Robinson after a group meeting, at which plans were formulated to carry a protest to Secretary Hull and possibly to President Roosevelt.

Robinson said "all but one" of the Representatives at the conference had voted in 1937 for extension of the trade agreements program.

"Now, however," he added, "everyone of us is ready to vote against its further continuation if they are going to trade our products off to the detriment of our country."

Robinson was made chairman of a three-member committee which will call on Hull with reasons duties on livestock and agricultural products should not be lowered in proposed agreements with Argentina and Uruguay and on copper in a pact with Chile.

The Administration meanwhile put new steam into its drive to capture Latin American trade from war-hindered European business by coordination into one committee the efforts of a score of Federal agencies.

Henry F. Grady, Assistant Secretary of State and former chairman of the Tariff Commission, heads the committee. It includes Edward J. Noble, Undersecretary of Commerce; John W. Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury; Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Exxport-Import Bank, and Leslie A. Wheeler, chief of the Agriculture Department's foreign service.

War Reaching Turning Point, French Believe

Communique Tells Of Capture of Nazi Machine Gun Nest

By G. H. Archambault.
Copyright by New York Times.

Paris, Oct. 24.—In the words of today's French communique, "nothing noteworthy" is happening on the front. Yet there is a general feeling that a turning point of the war has been reached, though no one is venturesome enough to predict how it will turn. From a military point of view, at all events, it is becoming evident that this war, which has not really begun, must change its form if it is to end.

It is considered, for instance, that frontal attacks either on the Maginot Line or the Westwall not only would be folly but would be calculated to procure that decision which is the object of the war. The purpose of building the Maginot Line and the Westwall, it may be recalled, was precisely to prevent anything happening there.

It is considered also that events of last week tended to show that the decision is not likely to be obtained by aerial attacks on warships, whether at sea or at anchorage, and submarine activity. Aerial warfare on open towns, it is insisted, would provoke reprisals without, however, bringing about the decision any more than it did in Spain. And diplomatic action has failed to end hostilities.

Meanwhile 1,000,000 armed men face another 1,000,000 armed men between the two walls and remain virtually inactive. Furthermore, they are separated now either by turgid rivers or by broad swamps. For the cold spell was short-lived and rain is rendering operations of any magnitude out of the question.

So from whatever angle the problem is approached the conclusion is that the form of the war must change. Moreover, since the Allies are content for the nonce to beleaguer Germany, it is for Germany to change the form—which in the final analysis means Hitler.

In fact, the forms of war are ever changing. Nothing could have differed more than the form of 1914 from that of 1918. New conditions call first for adaptation, then for new solutions. So it must be now. The winter months may be marked by preparations for new strategy.

It would be well, therefore, occasionally to forget the front and consider the rest, that industrial front where more and more engines of war are being built, where possibly some unknown weapons are being evolved. (The French today mobilized their scientists for national defense.)

In one raid east of the Moselle, the French report the capture of a machine gun and its crew of three in an outpost. West of Forbach the Germans tried to take one of their own Hamlets still within the French lines. Employing a company of infantry each time, they thrice attempted storming tactics. On each occasion they were driven back by hand grenades.

4 British, 1 Neutral Ship Sunk by Nazis

By the Associated Press

The war at sea entered a new and more intense phase yesterday with the sinking of five merchant ships—four of them British—amid mounting evidence that at least two swift German warships have eluded the British blockade and are roaming the Atlantic.

Yesterday's sinkings, which sent British losses to 45 ships and neutral losses to 29, made the last 24 hours the worst of the war for Britain's sea-borne commerce.

But it was the emergence of the powerful 10,000-ton pocket battleship Deutschland and the 5,400-ton cruiser Emden as maritime menaces that gave a more sinister aspect to the German efforts to counteract Britain's Baltic and North Sea blockade.

Except for the still unconfirmed reports of several weeks ago that the pocket battleship Admiral Scheer was operating in the South Atlantic, Nazi sea warfare had been confined to submarine activity, which Britain claimed was being successfully combatted.

But if, as seems likely, large warships have slipped through the British North Sea fleet—and naval sources admit that is a possibility—Germany has a far stronger weapon. The surface ships have far longer cruising ranges than submarines, and will be far more difficult to combat, with their heavier guns, greater speed and heavier armor.

First indication of their presence came when it was reported that one or both had seized the City of Flint.

A British sailor, from the freighter Stonegate, said at Trondheim, Norway, the Deutschland had sunk his ship six days out of Panama. The Stonegate, he revealed, had picked up survivors of another British freighter, unidentified, torpedoed with the loss of 15 men.

The two crews were put aboard the City of Flint several days later and released at Tromsoe, Norway. Then came the report yesterday that three British freighters, the Menin Ridge, the Tafna and the Ledbury, had been sunk 80 miles off Gibraltar. It was believed all three vessels were convoyed, and that their destruction was more likely under the guns of surface raiders than by torpedoes of submarines.

Tonnage losses of all nations rose to 399,319, exclusive of millions of dollars worth of cargoes. The total known loss of life was 1,774.

The American freighter Crown City radioed Washington she had rescued the crew of 31 from the Ledbury and had picked up 5 survivors from the Menin Ridge. The message said 22 men were lost from the Menin Ridge.

No report was made on the survivors of the Tafna. Such was also the case in the destruction of the Scottish freighter Clan Chisholm, 7,256 tons. Glasgow officials announced she had gone down, but gave no details.

The Greek steamer Konstantinos Hadjipateras, 5,962 tons, was sunk by a submarine in the North Sea while carrying 8,200 tons of scrap iron from Boston to Tyne, England. Fifteen of the crew escaped to the English coast. Four were lost, including an English pilot.

Neutrals' losses in the war rose to 29. The French have lost 8 ships and the Germans 10. Twenty Scandinavian ships are among the neutral losses.

Police Quarrel Believed Over In Shanghai

Americans Report Anti-Christian Drive Gaining in China

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, Oct. 24.—Cornell S. Franklin, chairman of the Shanghai municipal council, said today he believed differences between International Settlement police and Chinese agents of the local Japanese-controlled regime would be settled without further violence.

Franklin made the statement after a conference with Japanese Consul General Yosiaki Miura; Fu Siao-En, puppet mayor of the Japanese-held portion of Shanghai, and the commander of the Italian defense sector of the settlement.

United States Consul General Gauss filed with the Japanese consulate charges that Japanese commercial interests were attempting to monopolize the Chinese egg exporting business at the expense of American egg-packers in China.

Missionaries Threatened

Peiping, China, Oct. 24 (AP).—Americans arriving from the interior of China reported today that anti-Christian campaigns, were becoming increasingly menacing in sections dominated by the Japanese army and others controlled by Chinese Communists. American missionaries were said to be among those affected.

The informants said the campaigns apparently were to drive Christians of all foreign nationalities out of China.

Japanese authorities at Sinsiang, North Honan Province, were reported to have confiscated ground belonging to the American Catholic Mission Society of the Divine Word and to have begun construction of their own building.

Yen Pegged to Dollar

Tokyo, Oct. 24 (AP).—The cabinet announced today that, beginning Wednesday, the market value of the yen would be stabilized on the dollar, instead of the British pound sterling.

Buying and selling rates, the announcement said, would be stabilized at 23 and seven-sixteenths dollars per hundred yen.

S. S. City of Flint Just Leased by U. S. Government

Only a few days and the leasing by the Maritime Commission of the captured freighter City of Flint averted the seizure at sea of a crew of employes of the United States Government instead of private operators.

Until leased to the United States Lines for her last trip the City of Flint was operated by an agent on behalf of the Federal Government and members of her crew were Federal employes. Proceeds of trips went into the Treasury.

Diplomatically, the difference probably is considerable—but to the crew now held at Murmansk, Russia, most of whom served under Federal operation, the distinction probably is purely academic.

41 Quit NYA for Private Work in September

Full-time private jobs have been obtained by 41 out of the 934 young men and women employed on National Youth Administration projects during September, Albert L. Miller, District youth administrator, said yesterday.

Most of the placements in private industry are made in co-operation with the District Employment Service, he said.

Roosevelt Denies Cabinet Change Planned

In reply to persistent rumors, President Roosevelt yesterday declared he contemplates making no changes in his Cabinet.

He said, further, at his press conference, that he doubted whether he would submit any nominations to the special session of Congress, following disposal of the neutrality bill.

They set a new endurance flight record for light land planes of 535 hours, 45 minutes. Both were stiff from confinement in their 1,100-pound, 55-horsepower plane that the league itself is Communist-controlled.

Dies to Name U. S. Workers in League

In a statement last night the league asserted that "publication of these names can in no way contribute to the purposes of the Dies committee as stated in the Congressional resolution which created the committee."

"The obvious purpose of this tactic," said the league, "is to intimidate Government employes by misleading publicity concerning their membership in a progressive organization whose aims have been misrepresented by the Dies committee." It said "not one of the league's activities could possibly have been called un-American by any fair-minded person."

Unanimous Decision

Decision to make public the names, which were obtained from league headquarters last month, was taken in a closed session of the seven-man committee attended by Chairman Dies and Representatives Starnes, of Alabama; Voorhis, of California, and Casey, of Massachusetts (Democrats), and Mason (Republican), of Illinois.

It was learned that Voorhis and Casey, both considered New Dealers, expressed doubt as to the advisability of publishing the names; but one member of the committee stated that the decision finally was made unanimously.

"There is not the slightest inference that any of the Federal employes who are members of the league are Communists," a committee member said last night. "But we think the names should be published because it is clear from evidence given this committee that the league is a Communist-dominated organization."

In testimony before the committee Monday, Dr. Harry F. Ward, league president, denied that the league was under control of Communists.

Zoning Board Sets 3 Cases for Hearing Nov. 1

The Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday listed three cases for hearing on November 1.

The Home Construction Co. has appealed to the adjustment board for permission to remodel the dwelling at 1618 Twenty-first street northwest, into an apartment house.

Permission to establish a gasoline station at 121 E street northwest has been requested by Delphine Desio. Steuart Bros., Inc., requested a permit for an eight-story addition at 1012 Fifth street northwest.

New Bomb Device Protects Planes From Antiaircraft

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—Already equipped with one of the world's best bomb sights, the Army Air Corps has perfected a device to give its bombers greater accuracy and to protect them from antiaircraft gunfire.

It coordinates the aiming of bombs at targets with the "robot" or automatic pilot in the cockpit.

Every air-bombing operation requires up to a full minute of straight flight for the bombardier to operate his bomb sight. Meanwhile, the plane has presented a perfect target to hypothetical antiaircraft gunners below.

By connecting the bomb sight with the robot pilot, which takes over the controls from the human pilot, the time required for aiming and dropping the bombs has been cut almost in half.

Mediator Fails To End Deadlock In Chrysler Talks

Detroit, Oct. 24 (AP).—A conference called by James F. Dewey, conciliator of the United States Department of Labor, failed today to end the deadlock in negotiations between the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers and the Chrysler Corporation.

R. J. Thomas, president of the U. A. W.-C. I. O., said Dewey's conference, the firstt Federal intervention in the dispute, had not resulted in a settlement

Members of the Michigan State LIabor Mediation Board withdrew from the conference they attended as observers| A. C. Lapin, member of the board, quoted Dewey as saying the controversy, which has 87,000 workers idle, would be settled today. Lappin blamed lack of cooperation by Dewey, in part, for the board's decsiion to step out.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

"VERY WARM FOR MAY" tunes are already being played in the Mayflower Lounge by Dick Koons' Orchestra as well as in the sprightly new musical comedy at the National Theater . . . This is typical fast-on-the-trigger work by Impresarios Sidney and Muarice Kafka who last season presented the tunes from "Knickerbocker Holiday" in the Mayflower simultaneously with the show's opening at the National . . . Among the more shinging of the "Very Warm for May" numbers are "In the Heart of the Dark," "All the Things You Are" and "High Up in Harlem."

BLUE ROOM QUIZ. College professors, sports fans and plain Mr. George Q. Public will have equal chances of winning prizes in the Shoreham Blue Room quiz session tomorrow eve . . . Prizes will range from $2 to $10 or more, depending on the difficulty of the question . . . As many questions as possible will be asked in the half-hour quiz and it's possible that rewards will total more than the planned $100. P. S. Even if you don't win a prize, you'll be repaid by the current floor revue with the shadow dancing of the Stanley Twins, the Latin dancing of Nitza and Ravel, Ross MacLean's splendid rendition of the aria from "Martha."

THESE CRAZY MELODIES. Mayfair. . . "Why Have Crocodiles So Comic Profiles?" is the unbelievable title of Jack Crowford's newest song. Mayfair's patrons look at each other in wild amaze, think that somehting's wrong with their ears.

Shar-Zad. The Gold Dust Twins, meaning Pinky Savitt and Pete Rienzi of Bill McCune's Orchestra, are eternally trying to see which can hit the highest note. So if you hear any stratospheric squeaks from the brass section it's just Pinky and Pete trying to outdo each other and Lily Pons.

Pirates' Den. That "Phantom Pirates" ditty is contagious as the mumps. All the customers shout it lustily as well as the 40 buccaneers. The men folks love the lines, "Oh, we likes red meat and we likes black rum—And we likes to jig 'till our knees are numb."

Metronome Room. The King's Jesters have 23 extra verses (we counted) for "Annie's Cousin Fanny." Dassn't quote 'em. But if blush easily, it's nice to remember that the Metronome lights are flatteringly soft.

Anchor Room. Matt Windsor has just composed "The Whisky Barrel Polka" and the way he rolls it around on the accordion you expect the bar'l to burst any second. Matt's "Whisky Barrel Polka" is a form of revolt against the "B. B. Polka."

El Morocco. Louis and the El Moroccos are giving a double shot of swing to "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet." When they get going, they turn good "old Dobbin" into a steeplechaser.

RIVIERA PICTURE. Commissioner Melvin Hazen and a party of friends leisurely enjoying the Macias melodies . . . That veteran authority on real estate and insurance, Mr. John Weaver, with bright-eyed and silvery-locked Mrs. Weaver . . . Barrister Milton King . . . Famous dancers, Maurice and Cordoba from the Earle Theater stage show.

FISHERMEN, AHOY! Biggest competitor to date for the Neptune Room fishermen's cup to be awarded this fall, is a 14-pound trout. There's still time to get in the competition, for the cup won't be awarded for a couple of weeks . . . Bring your big fish, provided it's caught in nearby waters, around to the Neptune and have it measured by Manager Dot O'Connell . . . If you wish, the Neptune will cook your fish free for you, serve it oh a big silver platter, only charge you for the accompanying trimmings.

BALLERINA EXQUISE. Most lovely and magical little person to arrive in our town lately is Ballerina Mara Bielinskaya, newest addition to the Troika revue. Mara was 18 last Saturday, looks like a blonde Dresden figurine, dances like Titania. She looks as though she'd whirled straight from the pages of a Russian fairy tale as she does the "Pizzicato Polka" and the classical "The Swan."

DOUBLE PORTION HALLOWEEN gayeties will be in order at Hi Hat. There'll be two orchestras, a group of imported entertainers, funmakers and souvenirs unlimited, and the party will be staged in both the Hi Hat and the adjoining Ambassador Room. P. S. Manager Russell A. Conn of the Ambassador Hotel stands out as the one man in town who's really cured a cold. He did it in the heroic manner by infra red rays, hot fomentations and steamroom sessions. Looking a little pale, he says, "I'm cured, but I wouldn't go through the cure again for all the tea in China, and Japan, too."

FELINE CHAMPS. A couple of cats are stealing the show at Bamboo Gardens. Tony and Joe, of Nelson's Boxing Cats, put on a fast five rounds. They never pull a punch and omit the most terrorizing mr-i-aww! But when they're not fighting, we understand that Joe and Tony ride around together in a ventilated suitcase and get along like a couple of turtle doves . . . Also at Bamboo are the pretty Vogue Dancers, the Ilsoom Antoine and DuBarry and that star acro-dancer, Mitzi Monay.

CLASSIC COSTUMING. Cafe Caprice. Maestro-ess Evelyn Tyner in black velvet, made cleverly with high neck and long sleeves and embroidered heavily with gold at the throat and wrists.

Madrillon. Mary La Marr in a scarf dress of black, without a single touch of color but deriving its effect from subtle draping. If it wasn't for Mary's little girl smile, she'd have looked positively stately.

King Cole Room. Evelyn Knight, slim as a wand in a pure white formal, a perfect choice for her since it enhances her blonde coloring and golden hair.

The King and his jesters, now creating gaiety in the Metronome Room. The jolly old gentleman in the rear is Metronome's new "King" who reigns over the bandstand

Realty Chiefs Ask Lessening Of Tax Burden

Levies Are 'Almost Confiscatory,' Report Of Boards Declares

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Oct. 24.—The tax committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards advocated lightening of the tax burden which it said had become "almost confiscatory."

"The greatest menace to real estate values, real estate equities and the business of real estate itself is the budget-making, tax-assessing, tax-collecting axis," Aubrey Maddock, of Hartford, Conn., regional vice chairman of the committee, told the national real estate convention.

"In many States, taxes to meet Governmental expenditures are almost, if not quite, confiscatory. The ability of the taxpayer to pay is of no importance to the tax-gatherer. He can grab the property itself for failure to pay taxes."

After receiving an analysis stating that whereas real estate is paying 40 to 60 per cent of all taxes levied by local, State and Federal governments, real estate accounts for only 16 per cent of the national income, the committee adopted a resolution asking relief.

It urged a taxation program whereby rental property would be appraised for taxation purposes on its average net annual productivity.

E. L. Ostendorf, of Cleveland, president of the association, said reports from boards throughout the Nation indicated 300,000 new family housing units, valued at $1,000,000,000, would be constructed this year.

"We would have had this improvement at this time if there had been no war," he said. "Indeed, so sound is the foundation for present realty recovery that not even a European war can stop it."

Md. Works Board Moves to Block Geology Transfer

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 24 (AP).—The State board of public works moved today to prevent transfer of the State departments of geology and forestry to the University of Maryland at College Park by questioning the authority of Dr. H. C. Byrd, university president, to absorb the offices.

Gov. O'Conor, a member of the public works board, said Attorney General Walsh had been asked for a ruling.

Byrd's plan already has been criticized by Dr. Edward B. Mathews, State geologist, who said he elt the department should be left at Baltimore. Byrd planned to create a professorship of geology, with the holder also to be superintendent of the geologic and economic survey.

NYA Head to Talk At Chambersburg Museum Opening

An educational center for popularizing consevation methods, the Caledonia Conservation Musium, built by the National Youth Administration in Michaux State Forest near Chambersburg, will be dedicated Thursday, with Aubrey Williams, NYA Administrator, as principal speaker.

The museum was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters and constructed by boys from the National Youth Administration. Built of native stone and timber, the structure will house exhibits demonstrating methods used by State and Federal agencies in carrying on conservation work. Exhibits will range from mounts depicting the life cycle of insect pests to scale models of huge flood control dams.

Winsome Queen Halloween Is 'Cinderella Girl'

By Scott Hart

Miss Winnie Porter, the Halloween queen, would have liked to polish off the problem yesterday along with the bowl of chow mein she was enjoying. But the fame that made a Congressman write her that she's a glory to Old Kentucky, that's swamped her with letters and phone calls, also poses the question whether she presides over one big parade or two.

The West End Citizens' Association, which sponsored her in the Halloween contest—where, in Kentucky words, she won in a walk—wants her to appear in its first annual parade (that also will feature four bands) tonight.

Phone Rings Steadily

The Greater National Capital Committee of the Board of Trade, sponsor of the Halloween parade, said Miss Porter should appear in no parades prior to her coronation, October 30, at the Raleigh Hotel, and her appearance when the goblins kiss off October at the big time jamboree the following night.

This was no matter to debate over a dish of chow mein, and couldn't be when the phone kept ringing, with people wanting to speak to Winnie Porter, the Halloween Queen.

There were other things to think about. For instance, that sweet letter from Representative Robsion (Depublican), of Kentucky; the thre telegrams—one from the Restaurant Association; the speech she will have to make at 4 p. m. tomorrow at FJSV, and the letter which hinted of movie possibilities.

Then the customers.

"Those customers knew it all the time," put in Mrs. Harriette Piper, proprietress of the inn where Miss Porter works.

Praised by Employer

"They just all kept saying: 'That girl is a beauty and she's sweet looking, too.' And I kept saying that I knew it, and when the association asked me if I could put a girl in the contest I said: "'Put a girl in the contest? I've got the winner here before the contest starts. She can't miss!'

"'Got a girl?' I said. Yes, indeedy, I had her.'"

Motherly Mrs. Piper went over and smoothed the collar on Miss Porter's dress. Miss Porter smiled.

"When they come to speak of winner . . ." Mrs. Piper continued. "Bet they'll be proud of her in Russell Springs, Ky., where she came from," said a customer.

"Maybe not," said Miss Porter; "not but 600 people there and I wasn't the prettiest girl there, I know."

Finns Get New Russian Proposals

proposals, it is rumored they refer at least in part to a Soviet demand for "military security" in the eastern part of the Gulf of Finland and more specifically to the Finnish districts close to the Russian frontier.

Ino Batteries Mentioned

In this connection, the reports mention the so-called Ino Batteries, a stretch of Finnish coast a few miles from the Russian frontier on the north side of the gulf opposite Kronstadt, big Russian fortress across the gulf.

With regard to Russian demands, including a revision of the status of the Aaland Islands to satisfy the Soviet conception of military security in the north Baltic, it is officially pointed out here that Finland has no right to unilaterally alter control of the Archipelago, which under the international agreement of 1921 is controlled by the League of Nations.

Any change of the Aaland status atthe present time would require the consent of the ten signatory powers, including Germany, France, Great Britain and Sweden. The convening of a conference at Geneva to revise the Aaland Island status is most unlikely under present conditions, besides it would encounter Sweden's opposition to any revision.

On other strategical points in the Baltic which may have attracted the Kremlin's attention, Finland is firmly determined to preserve her sovereign rights. At the same time, her attitude toward Russia is to make necessary concessions serving to remove Soviet apprehensions about the possibility of being attacked through the Baltic.

But as Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko said today, Finland firmly refuses to cede any territory, or to conclude any pact involving her vital interests or prejudicing her freedom of action as a neutral state.

New Decrees Issued

To safeguard that stand, Finland has practically completed defense measures. A new decre authorizes the police and the military to supervise the mails, telephones and telegrams. Other legislation provides for the exclusion of unauthorized persons from certain port areas.

President Kyosti Kallio, in an exclusive interview with the New York Times, declared "We are not at all armed sufficiently for attack, but if our independence is threatened, we will stand and stick unflinchingly.

"We are grateful to all the American republics which sent, during the conference in Stockholm, telegrams of friendship and encouragement, and we never forget the deep joy we felt when President Franklin D. Roosevelt supported us in our fight for our right by direct steps to Moscow."

"Hitler Youth" Called

Berlin, Oct. 24.—Germany's future soldiers, Hitler Youth members from 16 to 18 years old, are called up for six months' semi-military training, it was announced today.

They will be trained in small-caliber rifle shooting and field service. Instead of their usual weekday sports periods, they will devote Saturdays and Sundays to the rudiments of military knowledge.

It is announced the purpose is to provide trained successors to the soldiers now fighting in the field.

Younger members, 15 to 18 years old, will not be trained with rifles, but will receive special body exercises. The youngest members, 10 to 14 years old, will continue to serve in collection drives for the winter relief fund.

Reprimand Asked For Laura Ingalls

Official reproof of Laura Ingalls, aviatrix, who dropped peace pamphlets September 28, while flying in the restricted area surrounding the White House, has been recommended by Examiner Roscoe F. Walter, the Civil Aeronautics Authority announced yesterday.

Walter asked the authority to find Miss Ingalls, Great Neck, Long Island, guilty of two violations of the Civil Air Regulations, but suggested her punishment be limited to a reprimand.

Some of the pamphlets dropped by Miss Ingalls fell on the White House lawn.

CCC Plans Open-House

Company 2352 of the CCC, located in Westmoreland State Park at Baynesville, Va., will hold an "open house" during the week of November 5-11, it was announced yesterday.

90-HOUR WINTER GRIND spared your OIL-PLATED engine

What wouldn't you give to have a weather prophet foretell all the worst 90 hours of Winter this year? . . . and stop their assault on your car!

You could afford to give a lot, but all it takes is the ordinary price of an oil-change. That's all you pay at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station for the extraordinary change to OIL-PLATING.

You need your engine OIL-PLATED now by patented Conoco Germ Processed oil to wipe out doubts of decent oiling during starting—when unplated engines wear worst. (A scant 6 or 8 minutes of such needless bad wear, repeated a scant 6 or 8 times a day through these cold months, still mounts up beyond 90 hours!)...90 life-sapping hours for engines abandoned to oils that can only "flow fast" . . . but not one instant of oil-starvation in 90 hours or 900 hours, when your engine's OIL-PLATED.

The "magnetic" action of Germ Processed oil gives every square inch in your engine a slippy overlay of OIL-PLATING—attached as firmly as any nickel- or chromium- or silver-plating. And could any plating ever drain down when you park in any cold, for any length of time? Then you know why OIL-PLATING—drain-proof—naturally has to be ready to lubricate before you're even ready to get out of bed, or away from work, or up from the card table. Long before any oil-pump could squirt a drop, your drain-proof OIL-PLATING has readied your engine for safe, easy starting. That's how you get the drop on the worst of Winter by OIL-PLATING now with patented Conoco Germ Processed oil. Keeps up your engine—your battery—your oil-level, too. Change now to Your Mileage Merchant. Continental Oil Co.

'Hollywood Cavalcade' Revives Pie-Throwing Art; Youthful Singer to Be Heard With Eddie Cantor; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IT TAKES YOU BACK a few years. I mean to say that during the exact period that comprises the hilarious opening sequences of "Hollywood Cavalcade," some of us were haunting the Masonic Temple, Thirteenth street and New York avenue, under the managership of the late Ned Stein, who, prior to that, long had been associated with the Columbia Theater when it was an outlet for Klaw and Erlanger touring stage attractions, to see precisely the sort of "feature" pictures that have been so faithfully reproduced in this new Twentieth Century-Fox attack of nostalgia. That was about a quarter of a century ago as the crow flies. The Masonic Temple at that time was Washington's top "movie house," with Ida Clarke, the present peregrinating accordioniste, thumping out appropriate accompaniments of the pictured action on the Steinway, Knabe, Stieff, or whatever it was. One suspects that there may be a few others still living whose memories of the "movies" date back that far.

BELL

For these old-timers, as well as for the newer generation with a yen to learn, more or less first-hand how the wiggle pictures ever managed to get started, "Hollywood Cavalcade" will prove more illuminating than any other picture of recent vintage. It brings the production of motion pictures down from the old Mack Sennett, pie-throwing days, when the Keystone Kops were in their heyday, to the beginning of sound on the screen. That would be 1926.

There are many, including this column, to whom the typical Sennett sequences will prove the most potent of all the finely authentic material that has been woven into this evolution of the cinema as a major source of world entertainment. Many of the old, original players are missing, but their places are admirably taken by newcomers who still are old-timers before the cameras. Jed Prouty, whom I remember first singing "On the Banks of the Saskatchewan," with Hazel Dawn in "The Pink Lady," is a perfect substitute for the late Ford Sterling, as the chief of the police department, and Eddie Collins, in the part always assumed in the old days by Charlie Murray, is no less authentic. Hank Mann and Jimmy Finlayson, of course, are completely in the tradition. So are the custard pies with which Alice Faye, George Givot and various others are bombarded.

But that is not all there is to "Hollywood Cavalcade." It reveals also a romance of the studios in which the careers of more than a few of the motion picture pioneers can be easily traced by those with retentive memories. And the whole thing is executed in Techicolor to lend the recreation of a heretofore lost era with greater accuracy and beauty than the original topics of its dramatic discussion ever possessed. Tribute is paid to the real beginning of sound on the screen by a reprint of Al Jolson and supporting cantors singing the "Kol Nidre," from "The Jazz Singer." If all this fails to convey some tangible notion of what the "movies" are all about, and why, there is practically no use arguing about it.

The picture that was viewed yesterday afternoon by one of the most exclusive preview audiences in the history of advance peeks will be coming along to a local screen before long now. It should take its place right up there in the same bracket with "Alexander's Ragtime Band" as an implement of popular appeal. Or is it merely that I am a sucker for this sentimental stuff that brings back the "good old days" so vividly? I don't think so. "Hollywood Cavalcade" has too much more than that to commend it, including Alice Faye and Don Ameche at their excellent best.

Who ever thought the thing would be so catching? In addition to the Capitol, Palace and Columbia, the Metropolitan and RKO-Keith's theaters also will break out their new bills tomorrow, making Thursday, normally the busiest day of the week, to all intents and purposes, a holiday on which it will be necessary to do only 23 hours work instead of the usual 18! But then, of course, there will be Friday, when we can sag back to the customary 17. Nature's compensation, or something like that.

Since we seem to be going in for reminders of the past today, we might as well say now as anytime that Monday night's metropolitan premiere of Max Gordon's production of the Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein 2d "Very Warm for May," at the National, brought back to more than one in the audience the first night of Ziegfield's production of the same authors' "Show-Boat." "Show Boat," on that memorable evening in the same playhouse, ran until almost 1 o'clock in the morning. "Very Warm for May" ran only until 11:50 o'clock Monday evening. As Max Gordon remarked when he dropped by the composing room at about 2 a. m., on his way to the train, to get a preview of Tuesday morning's review, "We are twice as well off as they were; we only have to cut 45 minutes."

With so much of conspicuous merit in score, script and cast there should be a honey of a futuristic musical comedy in "Very Warm for May," when the pruning is finished. The present trouble with this first collaboration of the Messrs. Kern and Hammerstein in seven years is not that it lacks meritorious content, but that it surfeits its audience with good things.

I fail to recall any musical show that was as it should be on its fourth performance. That fellow who observed that "Musical comedies are not written, they are re-written" said something—except in this case it is a problem merely of plucking instead of rewriting.

At least that is the way it seems to this desk 24 hours after having enjoyed a redundant evening that reached the point of dullness remarkably few times, everything considered.

When Eddie Cantor comes to the stage at Loew's Capitol tomorrow with his crew of radio specialists, Leni Lynn, after all, will be a member of his entourage—if that is what it is.

There was fear that the District's overzealous child labor law would prevent the youthful Miss Lynn's appearance and, to a certain extent, it will. This widely heralded 16-year-old vocal find will be heard only three times a day, instead of the usual four or possibly five. She will not appear on the stage after 7 p. m., in conformity with the statute that assumes all stage children to be the abused victims of vicious persecution.

Miss Lynn, by the way, was sent to Hollywood by citizens of her native Passaic, N. J., to sing for Louis B. Mayer. Once her voice was heard, she immediately was put under contract. She will be seen and heard first on the screen with Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland in "Babes in Arms," an early booking on F street.

Halloween costume parties will be celebrated at 12 of the Warner Brothers neighborhood theaters this Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. Cash prizes will be awarded for the prettiest costumes, and the funniest, worn by children between 7 and 14 years of age. Similar prizes will be voted those under 7. Special screen features have been booked for the single performances at the Ambassador, Beverly, Calvert, Colony, Kennedy, Penn, Sheridan, Silver, Tivoli, Uptown, York and Apollo.

MARY CARLISLE,

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Oct. 24.

Eleanor Roosevelt's comments concerning Dorothy Thompson and Walter Lipmann's interpretation of Lindbergh's speech might have been all right under any other by-line but that of the wife of the President. To avoid a recurrence of such a slip might we suggest she insert F. D. R.'s photo in "My Day" instead of her own just to remind her who she is . . . And as for Lindy recall "The Copperhead," a play in which Lionel Barrymore was shunned by his countrymen and accused of being a spy. He was a spy all right—but for Abraham Lincoln and the democracy he loved so much that he didn't mind being hated!

HOPPER

Mrs. Cantor was congratulating Eddie on the birth of a son to a member of the Cantor clan. "Well, darling," cooed Ida contentedly, after all these years we finally have a boy." "Yes," the new grandpa agreed, sharing their daughter's happiness, "but like everything else in Hollywood we had to work it through an agent!"

Nelson Eddy supported his wife, Ann, in a white-tassel trimmed gown, held on precariously with gold clips. I don't like the way Nelson looks. I don't think he ever gave himself sufficient time to rest up from that strep throat he had last year. I don't want to be an old 'I told you so," but he'd better look out and take care of himself . . . Judith Anderson sat quietly in a corner reviewing the Hollywood scene . . . Cobina Wright breezed in with Junior Cobina and made straight for Stokie armed with everything but her press book . . . There, too, was Meriam Cooper and his pretty wife, Dorothy Jordan . . .

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 24 (INS).—Ilona Massey's days of inactivity at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer are ended. Today La Massey can have what she wants and that's because Pomona, the college town, famous for the sneak previews, gave her a rousing cheer when "Balalaika" was previewed Saturday night. Nelson Eddy, who has never been called a great lover, not only sang his best, but so surprised my amateur college sleuths that I was bombarded with letters telling me to be sure to watch for the new Eddy, and those college kids know their movies.

LOUELLA PARSONS

As for Ilona, I was greatly interested to hear today that Edward Sheldon's play, "Romance," will be converted into a musical play for her under the Aegis of Larry Weingarten. I first saw Doris Keane on the stage in "Romance" years ago and it made a lasting impression. Then Greta Garbo was starred in the silent version, which was disappointing to those of us who had loved the stage play.

The biggest surprise of the year was the way the fans all over the country applauded Buster Keaton in "Hollywood Cavalcade"—proving what I've said so many times—that the public does not forget old favorites. What Darryl Zanuck did for Buster when he gave him the break cannot be overestimated. It's brought him back with a vengeance. Today the dead-pan Keaton conferred with Boris Morros, who is trying to get him to do a talkie of "The Navigator," his greatest silent success. Ralph Spence has written the scenario and it is all ready to go, as soon as the necessary papers are signed.

Spencer Tracy trained out of Hollywood tonight accompanied by Howard Strickling to go East to gather all available material on Thomas A. Edison. M-G-M is leaving no stone unturned to make the biography of the great inventor an authentic one, for the Edison biography is being made to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of motion pictures. Spencer and Howard go direct to Detroit, where they will be guests of Edsel Ford, and while in Michigan they will look at the Dearborn Foundation. Later they will talk with Edison's widow at East Orange, going from there to see his son, Charles, who is now Assistant Secretary of the Navy. You can rest assured nothing will escape Spencer's eye, as he is very thrilled over the Edison assignment.

Chatter in Hollywood: Andrea Leeds was kept at the studio by Director Sidney Lanfield until the last minute on retakes for "Swanee River." She finally made the plane escorted by motorcycle cops. But she didn't have a minute to spare. She's being married tomorrow in Del Monte to Bob Howard and is probably the only motion picture star who was ever given a $65,000 engagement ring. Rumors are that young Bob, who is the son of the "Seabiscuit" Howards, gave her a handsome settlement before their marriage. Andrea says it is her intention not to make another movie for some time, if ever.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Brian Aherne's birthday gift to his bride, Joan Fontaine, is a complete golfing set; the Loretta Young-Bob Ritskin friendship is interesting Hollywod. They were a diner twosome at Victor Hugo's cafe; Steffi Duna and her erstwhile groom, John Carroll, at a tete-a-tete Bali dinner; Rose Davies, dressed stunningly and looking as young as her pretty daughtre, Mrs. Arthur Lake, dining at the Cafe LaMaze with the Lakes and Prince David Mdvani; the pup Robert Preston is showing his pals was a gift of Dorothy Lamour;; Judith Barrett planed to Del Monte for the Leeds-Howard ceremony. She is Lin Howard's vurrent hearbeat.

Lupe Velez is celebrating the finish of her picture, "Mexican Spitfire," with a beeg party Saturday night; Ida Lupino is happy that her dad, Stanley Lupino, well known on the British stage, will arrive here by Christmas time; Mary Healy, the Zanuck discovery, is keeping dates with Ken Murray; Pandro Berman, having put "Hunchback of Notre Dame" in the can, is heading for Oregon for some salmon fishing. Vi, his bride, and Leila Hyams accompany him; Allan Hersholt and that pretty wife of his, Osa Massen, will take a belated honeymoon at Carmel-by-the-Sea.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Cole Porter Musical Billed For Next Week

'Leave It to Me' Monday at National; Film Openings Advanced

"LEAVE IT TO ME." Last season's smash musical-comedy success will open a week's engagement at the National Theater next Monday evening with William Gaxton, Victor Moore and Sophie Tucker continuing in the stellar roles. With music and lyrics by Cole Porter and a book by Bella and Samuel Spewack, the merriment concerns a bashful tycoon of Topeka, Kans., whose wife has had him named Ambassador to Russia. Victor Moore plays the reluctant and undiplomatic ambassador, Miss Tucker is his ambitious spouse, and William Gaxton, an obliging newspaper correspondent. "My eHart Belongs to Daddy," and "Get Out of Town" are two of the hit tunes. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Palace

"BEAU GETE." Gary Cooper, Ray Milland and Robert Preston play the three Geste brothers in this remake of the P. C. Wren novel, one of the most popular films of its day. The French Foreign Legion forms the background for the incessant action of the film, which features battles with desert tribes and the revenge the brothers mete out to a brutal sergeant, who is convinced that one of them has stolen a priceless jewel. Susan Hayward and Brian Donlevy have the leading supporting roles and William A. Wellman, who made "Wings," and many other adventure pictures, directed. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"THE ROARING TWENTIES." The turbulent twenties, the day of the flapper, the speakeasy and gang rule, forms the background for this story, by Mark Hellinger, which costars James Cagney and Priscilla Lane, with Humphrey Bogart, Gladys George, Frank McHugh, Jeffrey Lynn and Paul Kelly. Three headliners cavort in the Earle's stage revue; Jack Haey, most recenty seen as the Tin Woodman in "Th Wizard of Oz;" Mary Carlisle, a partner of Bing Crosby in many of his screen musicals, and Jack Teagarden and his orchestra. Howard Nichols, Roberts and Martin, Tiny Ann and Tony Small are others on the stage. Opens Friday morning.

RKO-Keith's

"THE ROAD BACK." First issued in 1937, this sequel by Erich Maria Remarque to his "All Quiet on the Western Front" is now being presented with many scenes which were considered too grim for release several years ago. Further scenes recently filmed on the Universal lot, enacted by Richard Cromwell, John King, Sigrid Gurie and others of the original cast have also been added to the original film. R. C. Sheriff, author of "Journey's End," made the adaptation. Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"FAST AND FURIOUS." Franchot Tone and Ann Sothern play the fast-thinking book-leader, Joel Sloane, and his peppery wife, Garda, in this mystery comedy that has a bathing beauty pageant as its background. Ruth Hussey, Lee Bowman, Allyn Joslyn, John Miljan and Bernard Nedell have featured roles. Eddie Cantor brings has own company of entertainers to the stage of the Capitol after an absence of seven years. Besides his own comedy and songs, the banjo-eyed star will present Bert Gordon, "That Mad Russian;" Fairchild and Carroll, popular piano team, and Joyce Hunter, society singer. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"U-BOAT 29." Conrad Veidt, Valerie Hobson and Sebastian Shaw have the leading roles in this timely story of the near-successful attempt of a German U-boat commander to destroy the British fleet in the North Sea, a matter strangely paralleling the news of today. Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"THE MAN IN THE IRON MASK." Joan Bennett and Louis Hayward return in the leading roles of the Alexander Dumas romance after a week's run at the Palace. The story concerns the hatred of Louis XIC of France for his twin brother. Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut and Alan Hale are in the cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"A MAN TO REMEMBER." This human story of a country doctor, one of last season's "surprise" pictures, is revived, with Edward Silis and Ann Shirley in the leads. It shares the Little screen with "The Wedding of Palo," an all-Eskimo film by the late Explorer Knud Rasmussen, in its first Washington showing. Opens this morning.

Trans-Lux

"THE BOOK OF BOOKS." The leading short subject at the newsreel house for the new week relates the story of the printing of the Bible. "Riding the Crest," a "Sportscope," depicts surf-riding; a trip to Africa is the subject of "Going Places," and the Disney cartoon is "Brave Little Taylor." Opens Friday morning.

Children's Theater

"DICK WHITTINGTON AND HIS CAT." The first of a series of six Saturday morning plays for children will be presented at the National Theater this Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The play tells the story of the country boy who thrice became Lord Mayor of London. It will be performed by an all-professional cast.

Gayety

"BRING ON THE DAMES." Zorita is the star of the new burlesque revue which will open Sunday afternoon with George Murray as the featured comedian. Billy Wallace, Grace Gordon, Wilbur Rance, Betty Lynne and Pearle Mylie are other principal performers. At this Saturday's performance, the Gayety will revive its amateur contests.

Belasco

"THE UNASHAMED." The film of life in a nudist camp is entering its fourth consecutive week at the Lafayette Square cinema. The "March of Time's" issue on "The March of the Movies" is also being continued.

". . . and why do you insist on buying a car now? . . . Why? . . . Because next month's our fifth wedding anniversary . . . Well, dear, that's not appropriate . . . It'll be our wooden anniversary—and if you insist on getting something, it should be wooden. Let's settle for a kiddie car."

12 P. M.: "Comm. Bill Herlands has been investigating the books of the 21 Club," a police official informs at the Tavern. "He said LaGuardia had ordered the inspection, because the Sales Tax Office told the Mayor that a number of the checks there had the Mayor's name signed to it. The investigation showed that one of the waiters had signed Fiorello's name, when a customer told him: 'Just put my name on the check.' That customer was Mayer—Louis B. Mayer" . . . "The Marx Brothers have exactly two more pictures to go," a producer assures at the Cotton Club, "and then will split up. Groucho will devote all his time to radio writing" . . . "What a big job it is," Mrs. Lewis Lawes sighs at Sardi's. "I married the warden, and now I'm learning that I married Sing Sing, too."

1 A. M.: "Alec Woolcott will appear in 'The Man Who Came to Dinner' in February," an agent reports at the Paradise. "He will appear with the coast company, opening in Santa Barbara." "Pierre Matisse, son of the great French painter, Henri Matisse, took a vacation from his N. Y. Art Gallery, and went to France recently," a returned voyager informs at La Conga. "The French immediately conscripted him. Matisse has three children, but didn't register them, because he thought he'd be back in America in time—so he had no legal exemption and now is in the Maginot Line" . . . "The Chicago reporters couldn't find John Steinbeck," a publisher relates at the Game Cock cafe, "because they looked for him in the swank hotels. He stayed in the $9-a-week Cass Hotel."

2 A. M.: "The Turkish Pavillion will renew its contract for the fair next year," a fair executive declares at the Gay 90's. "I just heard from H. H. Rogers," a bar-standee reports at Tony's. "He says he'll anchor his yacht in a solid concrete foundation outside of Miami Beach this winter, and open it to the public as a night club" . . . "Before Constance Bennett appears in the rewritten revival of Coward's 'Easy Virtue,'" a ringsider states at Monte Carlo, "she'll make a lecture tour, in connection with her cosmetics business" . . . "Meet my gagwriter," Milton Berle tells the audience at the International Casino, and from the wings he brings out Broadway Rose, the Broadway loon.

3 A. M.: "Yesterday, one of America's greatest actresses phoned Woolcott, and learned he was visiting Booth Tarkington in Maine," an editor tells Eddy Duchin at the Persian Room. "She phoned him there, gave her name to the servants, who then told her: 'Mr. Woolcott says for you to call him back in a half-hour.'" . . . "Picasso is remaining in the south of France," a director informs at Barney Gallant's. "He gave most of his money to the Republican cause, in the Spanish War, and has very little left."

4 A. M.: "I just left Spencer Tracy, who confessed that the picture he made with Hedy Lamarr, 'I Take This Woman,' was the worst he's ever seen," a scenarist declares at the Versailles. "He said when it was put on the shelft, all the other films moved away from it."

5 A. M.: "A representative of Skoda, the Czech munitions factory which now belongs to Germany, went to see Larry Adler, the harmonica player, in Hollywood," a publicist reports at Longchamps. "He wants Adler's name placed on the harmonicas made by Skoda now—although Larry is non-Aryan" . . . "Last night's newspapers said I met Hitler?" Honeychil' Wilder repeats at Reuben's. Well, I did meet him—in Berlin, at a girl's apartment. Unity Mitford was there. What? How did I know he was Hitler? He told me so" . . . "Here's how Edgar Bergen first came to earn big money," an agent reveals at Lindy's. "After his first two broadcasts had made Bergen's popularity leap, his agent promised to get him a 400 per cent increase in salary. He went to the sponsor and demanded an increase of almost $1,500. The sponsor refused, insisting they had a seven-year contract, and Bergen couldn't break it. 'Okay, he won't break it,' the agent told them, 'but remember one thing—the contract is with Bergen, and not with Charlie McCarthy. Suppose Charlie's dropped from the script?' The sponsor agreed to the increase."

6 A. M.: " . . . And before you go to sleep, look at my new hat . . . What? . . . It's so extreme that people will ask who I am? . . . Well, dear, that's better than the other one, which made 'em ask who do I think I am?"

British Vessels Offer Low War Risk Rates

New York, Oct. 23.—War risk insurance at a comparatively low rate and equal to that offered by American underwriters now covers cargo shipped in British vessels in world-wide rading, according to an announcement made yesterday by E. P. Rees, general manager of Furness Withy Co. This announcement by the British shipping company confirms reports circulated in shipping circles yesterday.

Under this extension of the British government-sponsored war risk insurance plan, shippers can now insure war risks on their cargoes moving in British vessels from and to any port in the United States.

Gains In Retail Trade

The pickup in factory employment, however, does not tell the whole story, she pointed out. In non-agricultural enterprises, more than 500,000 persons were reemployed between August and September. The September employment total was about 1,150,000 persons higher than September, 1938. Besides manufacturing industries, substantial gains occurred last month in retail trade, mining and transportation.

In the District of Columbia 879 reporting establishments revealed a total employment of 21,753 in September, a gain of 5.6 per cent over August. These establishments reported a weekly pay roll of $166,061, an increase of 3.2 per cent over August.

Weekly factory pay rolls were about $7,200,000 greater in September than in August, Miss Perkins said. The pay-roll gain was about 4.3 per cent, while the employment gain was 3.8 per cent.

The fact that pay rolls rose more rapidly than employment, she pointed out, indicated that there was some increase in the amount of work which workers on a part-time basis were doing. The Bureau of Labor Statistics, however, has no figures on increases in part-time employment.

Rails Employ More

The September factory employment index of 100.1 per cent of the 1923-25 average, Miss Perkins declared, is the highest for any month since November, 1937. Factory employment in September, however, still was about 10 per cent below the levels reached in July and August, 1937.

Due to a decided pickup in rail transportation, class 1 railroads in September employed 14,000 more persons than in August, according to reports from the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Employment increased 6.1 per cent in brokerage houses in September, due to the stock market rise. Employment in retail trade advanced by about 5.5 per cent, which is a little more than seasonal, while oil wells cut their forces by about 3 per cent, reflecting curtailed operations in a number of States.

Durable goods industries, Miss Perkins said, showed the most marked gains between August and September. Employment in these industries rose 6.7 per cent and pay rolls advanced 7.8 per cent.

Churches Unite to Combat Juvenile Crime in Southeast

Intensive Study of Constructive Forces Is Planned, With View to Correlating Organizations' Activities

By Robert Tate Allan.

Aroused by juvenile delinquency in Southeast Washington, nine Protestant congregations of five denominations have united to battle that and other community evils.

They are the Methodist, Episcopal, Disciples of Christ, Presbyterian and Brethren groups, located in an area housing 54,000 people, or 8.7 per cent of the District's population, but with 15 per cent of its juvenile crime—a situation which helped to bring about formation of an inter-church organization at a dinner at Metropolitan Presbyterian Church. The section has 11,800 children between 3 and 18.

An intensive study of the constructive forces in the community, encouraging use of the various social and welfare agencies at people's disposal, and correlation of social and religious organizations' work in the area, will be one of the most important steps, according to the council chairman, the Rev. George H. Bennett, pastor of Wilson Memorial Methodist Church, 758 Eleventh street southeast, who pointed out that 90 out of 300 persons in the community were not using available social welfare, religious and other helpful resources.

One of the first moves will be to ascertain the number of boys and young men in the community, their association or connection with the Boy Scouts, Police Boys Club, Y. M. C. A. and other social organizations, said Mr. Bennett, chairman of the juvenile delinquency and adjustment committee of the Neighborhood Council.

The Southeast section will be plotted into "church-responsibility" sections, with volunteer workers canvassing homes to determine the unchurched, encourage enlistment, and ascertain other facts.

"A church which does not meet the needs of its own community has no reason to exist," declared Mr. Bennett, explaining that four out of the nine churches drew most of their members from other parts of Washington.

Cooperating churches and their pastors, in addition to Wilson Memorial and its leader, are Trinity Methodist Church, the Rev. Edward B. Wilcox; First Methodist, the Rev. A. F. T. Raum; North Carolina Avenue Methodist, the Rev. Bernard I. Barnes; Fifteenth Street Christian, the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers; the Washington City Church of the Brethren, Dr. W. D. Bowman; Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich; Reformation Lutheran Church, Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, and Christ Episcopal, the Rev. Edward Gabler.

One laymen and one clergymen from each congregation, soon to be elected, will head the executive committee of the council, which will launch a Southeast school of religious education in January, under the direction of the representative Sunday school superintendents.

Roosevelt Favors State Compacts to Control Oil Flow

President Roosevelt yesterday expressed unqualified approval of the principle of control of oil production through interstate oil compacts.

He told his press conference that he approves the Atkinson bill, to be voted on in California, to control the industry through interstate compacts.

Early in his administration, he said, it became aparent that a method of controlling oil production must be found. In 1935, he continued, he disclosed his belief that States could handle the situation by interstate compacts. If States found themselves unable to solve the problem, he said, the Federal Government probably would have to step in.

Arlington's Power Fight

Arlington County is confronted by one of the most important issues ever submitted to its voters. On November 7 that rapidly growing community will vote on the proposal of its federation of citizens associations to issue $1,475,000 in bonds for the acquisition of a power distributing system.

The forthcoming referendum will be the climax of a four-year fight to reduce rates for electricity in Arlington County. When the Virginia Corporations Commission refused to compel a reduction in the Virginia Public Service Co.'s rates, or to permit a competitive arrangement between that concern and the Braddock Light & Power Co., a group of citizens began the fight for a public power distributing system. It is not proposed to reduce rates below those charged by the Braddock company, now supplying about 15 per cent of the county's electricity. But proponents of the public ownership plan assert, on the basis of an expert survey, that the county could reap a profit of $131,000 per year by operating its own system.

Sponsors of the plan propose to take over the existing power distribution facilities, to modernize the system and serve the entire county with power to be purchased wholesale from private generating plants. Ample current can be obtained, they assert, from any one of various different sources. And if it should prove necessary for the county to generate its own electricity, they say, another bond issue could be approved for that purpose.

The Arlington Chamber of Commerce takes a very different view. It envisages the possibility of three distribution systems in the county instead of two as at present. The existing private companies, it suggests, cannot be expected willingly to withdraw from the field. Doubt is expressed that "the courts will sanction the acquisition through condemnation proceedings of the plants of companies already satisfactorily furnishing electric service at the lowest rates in the State."

To this argument the federation replies that the law permits condemnation of existing power lines if the county wishes to establish a unified system of its own. It insists, moreover, that rates charged by the Front Royal municipally-owned system are lower than those available to most Arlington residents.

Many voters are likely to be confused by this clash of arguments from two organizations devoted to the welfare of the county. To add to the confusion, county officials are maintaining official silence. Unless the law governing condemnation of private property under these circumstances can be clarified from an authoritative source and the whole project can be lifted from the controversial fog in which it is now involved, it will be extremely difficult for the rank and file of voters to make an intelligent choice.

However, the federation of citizens associations appears to have won its fight whatever happens. Electricity rates in Arlington have been substantially reduced. Apparently the chief question before the electorate on November 7 will be whether the county should go into the business of distributing power in the hope of making profits for taxpayers.

Star Gazing

Most of Washington's school children learn "Twinkle, twinkle, little star, How I wonder what your are . . . " at an early age. But few of them ever get much beyond the stage of wondering. Lack of a planetarium in this city, for one thing, has long been a handicap to those who wish to pursue this study or even obtain a general understanding of the cosmos. The curiosity of many students is aroused by a graphic representation of the stellar bodies in motion. And every visitor to a planetarium comes away with a clearer picture of the earth's relation to other planets.

Washington can indeed look with envy on Pittsburgh, which last night dedicated a new million dollar planetarium donated to the people of the city by the Buhl Foundation. Reputedly one of the finest in the world, it shows the positions of the stars as they have been in the past, as they are at present and as they will be in the future. At the same time, the building houses an institute of popular science.

As an instrument of education this gift is invaluable and will repay its large cost through the pleasure and instruction it will offer to thousands of people. It is to be hoped that Washington, too, will some day have such a planetarium.

Striking Coincidence

As the Senate prepares to vote on the revised neutrality legislation it is announced that an American freighter, owned by the United States Maritime Commission, but under charter to a private operator, has been captured by a German warship and is now held in the Russian port of Murmansk.

It may be pure coincidence that the first incident of the war involving American shipping in a serious way comes at this moment. But it does not seem wholly accidental that the Germans had a warship out through the British blockade prepared to make this seizure. That the warship was a lone raider is attested by the fact that it did not attempt to take the City of Flint to a German port, but steered it first to Norway and then to Russia. The raider, seemingly, was out for a particular purpose, and that purpose may well have been the capture of an American ship at this particular time.

That supposition is not weakened by the tone of remarks made by several Senators yesterday. They drew the moral that if the shipping clauses of the pending neutrality law had been in effect the City of Flint could not have been in the war zone and therefore could not have been captured.

What Germany would have welcomed is what Senator Tobey attempted to put through in his motion, defeated on October 10, by a vote of 65 to 26. That motion was designed to put the restrictions on American shipping into immediate effect and to defer consideration of repeal of the arms embargo. Both aspects of this program would have accorded perfectly with the desires of Berlin.

Since the defeat of Senator Tobey's plan there has been a pronounced tendency toward lessening the more undesirable of the proposed restrictions on American shipping. The capture of an American ship, at this particular juncture, will operate to prevent any further attenuation of the shipping restrictions, and even seems to give a certain superficial justification to the plan which Mr. Tobey indorsed.

It does this, however, only on the assumption that if the United States ceases to uphold its rights under international law, those rights will not be trampled upon by a belligerent. It is, of course, true that rights which are voluntarily abnegated need not be defended. But it does not follow that national interests are in any way served by this procedure. On the contrary, there is established a presumption that whenever an American right is called in question the United States, to escape immediate difficulties, will yield the point at issue.

Under any definition of neutrality, and under the neutrality law now on the statute books, the City of Flint was wholly entitled to be where she was, carrying the cargo she was carrying. If that point is ceded without protest it will be only a matter of time before other, more fundamental rights, are challenged by belligerents, no matter how many legislative concessions to their appetite have been made in advance.

Martial Millinery

Maybe there is something after all to the old stuff about human nature being purified in the flames of war. Anyhow, war hath its victories no less than peace, and as an instance let us take this business of women's hats.

In the terrible year of doubts and fears that followed the peace of Munich hats began to appear in shapes that resembled nothing ever before beheld on land or sea. There was no woman so beautiful that she could not be reduced to an apparition out of a bad dream by one of these hats. The male half of mankind regarded them with awe and uneasiness. But only a few bold minds dared inquire into their origin. One prevalent hypothesis was that these hats had been designed by a brotherhood of misogynists with the deliberate purpose of making it impossible for people to remain in love.

Whatever the reason, a wonderful process of regeneration now seems in progress. In the current number of Life for instance, you will find some illustrations of the salutary changes in millinery design wrought by war. Indeed, the new Paris hats for women have far more military smartness and elan than the inverted coalscuttles worn by the soldiers on either side of the Siegfried Line.

There is a sweetly nostalgic charm, a wistful gaiety, in these adaptations from the old hussar's busby and from the quart-measure kepi that officers of the old Hapsburg army and chorusmen in the old Lehar operas loved to wear. We make no secret of our pleasure in these hats, and in the lively new epauletted and gilt-buttoned frocks that go with them.

Of course, our correspondents returning from the fashion front warn us not to be deceived by any of this military glamour. These hats, they tell us, are mere anachronistic whimsies, like the Polish cavalry. We have yet to see, they say, the horrors of modern war as reflected in hats.

They bring back harrowing yarns of new hats shaped like infantry tanks, captive balloons, pillbox fortifications, antiaircraft batteries, sandbag shelters or pocket battleships. They tell of hats trimmed with periscopes and torpedoes, plane propellers, barbed wire and propaganda leaflets. Most curious of all is the hat modeled after the French military communiques. It is so cunningly fashioned that not even an expert can tell of what material it is made, nor which is the top or bottom of it.

But we do not advise you to take these tall stories seriously. Frankly, we consider these to be examples of the atrocity tales that accompany all wars.

A Case In Point

Twenty-three years ago, the United States found itself confronted by a situation analogous to that which now faces Russia as a result of the City of Flint affair. The course then pursued by this Nation is instructive.

On January 15, 1916, the British merchant ship, Appam, en route from the west coast of Africa to Liverpool with 170 passengers on board, eight of them prisoners of war, and a cargo of cocoa beans, palm oil, kernels, tin, maize and some boxes of specie, was overtaken and captured by a German commerce raider, the Moewe.

Instead of being taken to a German port, which would have meant running the British blockade, the Appam, navigated by German officers, was brought into Hampton Roads, Va. The German authorities in the United States then notified the Department of State of the intention to keep the prize in an American port until further notice.

Soon after the owners of the Appam brought suit for the recovery of the ship and its cargo, basing their case on the claim that holding and detaining the vessel in American waters was in violation of the law of nations, the laws of the United States and the neutrality of the United States.

When the case reached the Supreme Court that tribunal handed down an opinion in favor of the owners. "The principles of international law recognized by this Government . . . " said Justice Day, who delivered the opinion, "will not permit the ports of the United States to be thus used by belligerents. If such use were permitted it would constitute of the ports of a neutral country harbors of safety into which prizes, captured by one of the belligerents, might be safely brought and indefinitely kept." And Justice Day cited approvingly the unratified Article 21 of the Hague Convention of 1907, which declared that:

"A prize may only be brought into a neutral port on account of unseaworthiness, stress of weather, or want of fuel or provisions.

"It must leave as soon as the circumstances which justified its entry are at an end. If it does not, the neutral power must order it to leave at once; should it fail to obey, the neutral power must employ the means at its disposal to release it with its officers and crew and to intern the prize crew."

The case of the City of Flint is strikingly like that of the British vessel whose fate as a prize of war was determined by the American courts in 1917. And the principles of international law cited by Justice Day in upholding the claim of the owners of the Appam would seem to apply with even greater force to the situation involving the City of Flint. For, while the Appam was of belligerent registry, the City of Flint belongs to the merchant marine of a neutral state.

On the basis of international law, therefore, the fate of the City of Flint revolves on the question whether Russia, which has professed her neutrality, is prepared to live up to the obligations of her neutrality.

What a world! About time you pay up your debts, draw up a strict budget and get lined up to save some money, your neighbor hauls off and buys a new automobile.

Well, it's about time to pawn the lawn mower and get the overcoat out of hock.

On Saying A Mouthful

From the Pleasures of Publishing.

Never again. No more puns in this sheet (well, hardly ever).

Our suggestion for a book of memoirs by a dentist, to be called—and we whisper it this time—Of Molars and Men, or Bye Bicuspid, has brought in too many other suggestions. Even Hugh Kelly, who, one would suppose, is too busy selling "Country Lawyer" to bother with such trivia, sends us from Whittlesey House another suggestion—"The Yanks Are Coming." Thomas M. Iiams, librarian at Colgate University, after turning in a verse which suggests that Caxton, Wynkyn and many others are turning over in their graves, adds: "To prove that I am a forgiving soul—I will still read The Pleasures of Publishing and buy bi-Columbia books, by Columbia authors, by heck. Bye now! You can see for yourselves how really bad it is!" Sorry, we can't see a thing in this mental fog.

The Boston Transcript comes out with a touch of New England conservatism and thinks that "A Dentist's Iliad" would be better because it "would make a nice companion volume for 'The Doctor's Odyssey.'" Cruelest blow of all comes all the way from California, from the San Francisco Chronicle. While professing to like our title, the Chronicle insinuates that it is a publicity man's "natural reaction to the job of having to say nice things about his firm's publications all the time."

Bessarabia

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The claim of Rumania to Bessarabia is treated in the press as if it were solely an outcome of the Treaty of Versailles. Rumania was under Turkish rule until 1878. In the year 1877 Russia declared war on Turkey, but the latter country could not be invaded except by sea or by crossing Rumania. Rumania thereupon revolted from Turkish rule and declared war on the side of Russia, and Russian troops invaded Turkey across Roumanian territory.

When the war was over and Turkey had been defeated, the Russians could not obtain further Turkish territory contiguous to their own country. They therefore annexed Bessarabia, which was formerly part of Rumania, and Rumania in compensation was given part of Bulgaria, then under Turkish rule, the Dobrudja. As this was mostly swampland, Rumania naturally felt that it had fought the war and gained nothing from it, inasmuch as the net result so far as Rumania was concerned was the loss of Bessarabia and the gaining of a swamp.

Neutrality Debate

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: It seems impossible for some of us at this distance to understand what all that noise is about in Washington. Is it really an effort to decide what should be done about the neutrality law, or a desire of selfish legislators to make themselves popular and get some free advertising? That is, free to them, but costly to the people and the Government who have to pay for all this useless talk.

Why are these great humanitarians now expressing such loud and noble sentiments regarding the cruelties of war, besides many farfetched personal opinions of vindictiveness, when they have willingly permitted the sale of war materials here for years to massacre the helpless Chinese? They seem quite willing to supply everything necessary to Japan to reduce China to a bloody pulp, because China cannot help herself; yet are so violent against this same assistance to nations of equal strength. Why aren't they denouncing Japan, these noble isolationists, instead of England? Is all this justice or hypocrisy? "PUZZLED."

Pact With Turkey

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Shorn of its diplomatic niceties, the Anglo-French-Turkish pact has this to say to the people concerned: "Hitler and Mussolini, keep your bloody claws off the Balkans and the Mediterranean. Mussolini, if you go to war on the side of Hitler, both of you will find a Turkish sword barring your path. British and French imperialists, you had better cultivate a genuine friendship with the Soviets, because if you make war on them, Turkey will not aid you."

"Rulers of the Balkan and Scandinavian countries, you, too, had better be more polite to the Soviets, because if your arrogance incenses them, Turkey cannot be your bodyguard for the simple reason that the bulk of Turkish people refuse to fight the Soviets. Soviet Union, while this pact demands the status quo in Europe, there is nothing in the pact to prevent you from befriending, educating and liberating as many peoples as you deem expedient. Turkey will not hinder you; the world's oppressors can put up only a weak resistance these days." SILVESTER K. FISH.

Sale Of Planes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Hoover and Lindbergh have both spoken against the sale of bombing planes to belligerents on humanitarian grounds. Both, however, have omitted reference to one very practical consideration which supports such sales on humanitarian grounds as well as in the interests of American peace.

Sales of bombing planes to belligerents under actual war conditions will necessarily affect, and may in the end determine, the command of the air in western Europe. They will, consequently, influence powerfully, if not decisively, the conduct of air warfare by the German high command.

If the Germans realize that the Allies are liable to attain future air supremacy through purchases of American planes, they will hesitate to order massed air attacks on civilian populations for fear of future reprisals. Since the Allies are not likely to take the initiative in such attacks, enhancement of their air strength through sales of American bombers will work directly to save thousands of civilians on both sides from death and mutilation from the air. Socialist Aims

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. R. E. Parrish, the secretary of the District local of the Socialist Party, in a letter to the editor appearing in The Post October 22, protested the treatment he received in attempting to reclaim from the Metropolitan Police records of the Socialist Party which the police had illegally acquired. Mr. Parrish, apparently was greatly pained to find that "the police officers proceeded on the assumption that the Socialist Party is a suspect group . . . "

I can readily appreciate Mr. Parrish's astonishment, since he represents a party that is generally considered harmless. The difficulty I think is to be found in the police department, where the special division set up to keep "in close contact with the activities of the veterans' movements, Socialist and Communist parties, and Workers' Alliance . . ." (Report of the Government of the District of Columbia for 1936, p. 102) is not sufficiently acquainted with the theoretical aims and tactics of the Socialist Party in order to draw the obvious conclusion as to the respectability of the Socialist Party.

"Bicycle Hazards"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Bicycle Hazards," justly points out the dangers which bicyclists face. And you point out the lack of "provision for bicycles" in American cities. It seems to me you could make a specific proposal:

The Federal Government has just taken over the old C. & O. Canal. It runs for 20 or 30 miles beside quiet waters, between the Potomac and the hills. Why not put a bicycle path the whole distance? We have spent billions in this country for motorists; and even the horseback riders have their share. Why not a really good scenic pathway for bicyclists, free of motor traffic, of a kind that would be an example for the Nation?

For Repeal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read much concerning revision of the neutrality law, most of which has emanated from isolationist Senators. I have heard that revision is the first step toward war; that we should mind our own business; that we are taking sides. I heard last spring that there would be no war. I have even read recently of a gentleman from Minnesota who, while himself presumably engaged in legislation directed toward keeping this country out of war, has suggested the seizure by the United States of land belonging to another nation—a policy much below the dignity of this Nation and one of the most aggressive and warlike acts possible to commit.

I have heard that the neutrality act was accepted in the first instance only after careful consideration of our lawmakers and should therefore stand. Cannot we say the same for the prohibition law? Did this stop drunkenness, promote honesty, respect for law, empty the jails? I say it did not, but had the opposite effect. Has the neutrality law prevented war? I have the highest respect for the men who sponsored it and for the ideals behind it. The main point to be considered now is how well it works today.

I say furthermore this law, instead of keeping us out of war will, if anything, weaken the position of the great democracies who are fighting to preserve the most valuable things in the world—liberty, honesty, truth, religion. Should we say "you are doing a fine job, but I am afraid to be accused of favoring you, I don't want to make the other fellow mad." Can we justify this position? The aggressor nations appear friendly today. Why should they not thus try to placate us?

The uncertainty of the English people for years postponed rearmament and no one is yet sure they began in time. Germany, during the same time under the policy of its dictator, was arming itself to the teeth while outwardly talking peace. If the aggressor nations ever succeed in finishing off the two European democracies, anyone who thinks they will still be as friendly toward us is badly deluded.

Canadian Answer

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am replying to a letter signed "Maurice Lavelle" in the which he says he "hopes it will not be long before Canadians become good Americans." Canadians have always been "Americans"—North Americans, Canada being in that hemisphere. However, if he thinks the Canadians will become "turncoats" to their mother country, he will get sadly left. No, sir; only "over their dead bodies!"

Why do the Canadian boys flock to aid England in time of distress? It is not because they are forced into it; they go without any conscription. Because it is the mother country that they were born in—their native land.

The Canadians are not cowards and are not rushing to join with the U. S. A. because they fear European wars. However, judging from the newspapers and talks of prominent citizens, the U. S. A. is "afraid," and wants to sort of "hide behind the skirts" of all North America.

That baloney about Canada needing the "protection" of the U. S. A. is all "poppycock." We Canadians would like to keep our country as it is, free from gangsters, political crooks, and the loud bedlam and noises that U. S. citizens love. Canadians for Canadians, is the motto of all loyal subjects of the British Empire and their honest, God-fearing King and Queen and all the royal family.

All Fools' Day in Fez

Sidi Taib and I had reached the Souk el Attarine in the course of our leisurely morning stroll when we heard a glorious burst of music, shrill and loud, with the drums carrying the rhythm strong and clear. "Come quick," said Sidi Taib, seizing my hand; "we mustn't miss it."

"But what is it?" I asked, as he dragged me through the crowd.

"It's the Feast of the Madmen—great fun."

So we pushed our way through the throng and finally reached the Bou Jeloud, where we met the procession. First came a crowd of urchins, their heads crusted with the usual sores, dancing and leaping with joy at the music. Then came the band of musicians, the players of wind instruments with their cheeks distended as though they were carrying an orange in each one. And glorious was the music they made that April morning, a wild shrill music with the thudding drums that made your heart leap with each grand burst.

Behind the musicians, trotting proudly under their burdens, came a host of slaves. Each slave carried on his head a great tray, and the trays were heaped with bread and fruits and steaming kai-ksou and roasted chickens and smoking meats and cakes all dazzling white with powdered sugar. They were followed by another band, and last of all came the charitable citizens of Fez who were providing this feast for the madmen.

We stopped before the great somber doors of the madhouse, and the musicians delivered a final ear-splitting flourish. The doors were flung open from within and we all crowded into the great tiled courtyard. There was a dank, musty smell about the place which not even the strong April sun, streaming into the courtyard and playing in the jet of the fountain, could dissipate. All around the central court were barred doors and from behind these doors wild howls greeted our triumphal entrance march.

The trays of food were set down about the fountain, the musicians arranged themselves in a corner, and we all crowded as best we could against one side of the courtyard, under the balcony, leaving the court itself clear. Then the keeper of the madhouse, clanging a bunch of great keys, went about unlocking the cells and flinging open the doors.

Out poured the madmen, four or five from each cell. Some stood listlessly at their doors, blinking their eyes in the strong sunlight. Others came forth howling, striving to outdo the musicians with their cries. They were clothed for the most part in tattered rags, although a few wore djellabas that were fairly new. Some five or six were stark naked. Their heads were not shaved, as a good Moslem's should be, but were covered with a tangled mat of hair.

Then they caught sight of the food, and with a wild roar they fell upon it. Even the heretofore listless ones joined in the rush, for there is none so mad he cannot feel the pangs of hunger. Like wolves they devoured it, cramming the food into their mouths with both hands. Some fell to fighting over bits of food, and these the keeper of the madhouse beat with a long stick until they ceased.

In the meantime, the crowd was shrieking with laughter at their antics. Sidi Taib, between great guffaws, pointed out to me the ones whom he considered particularly diverting. The naked ones, of course, drew many ribald comments. All the while the two bands, who had joined forces in a corner, were playing the most stirring music they knew. When the madmen had eaten every morsel of food on the trays, some of them turned their attention to the music. They came up close to the musicians, as though they could not hear from afar, and watched them intently.

Presently one old man began to sing in a high, quavering voice. The musicians moderated their blasts to a suitable accompaniment, and the old man's voice rose in a wail. The drum caught its subtle rhythm. A stringed instrument followed it. A hush fell over the courtyard as the voice rose, a quarter-tone at a time, in its lament.

"Listen," said Sidi Taib; "it is the song of a father who has lost his son."

Then the song ended, and the old man sat still, staring at nothing, with tears wet upon his cheeks. The band began its playing again, till the keeper of the madhouse shouted something. Everyone began to rush for the door.

"What did he say?" I asked Sidi Taib.

"'All out.' He means we are to leave."

So we all hastened out again into the streets, the slaves carrying their empty trays and the musicians their silent instruments. Behind us the doors fell to with a thud, and we could hear the great bolts being pushed home.

"But, Sidi," I protested, "some of the madmen may have rushed out with us."

"Surely," replied Sidi Taib. "If they have wits enough to go out with us, then they are no longer mad."

"And some people may have got themselves locked in."

"Perhaps. If they did not have sense enough to leave, then they are mad. In any case, they will have their chance again next year, inshallah."

Fair Enough

The Great I Am

IT SEEMS impossible that in all history the human race has produced any more humiliating rebuke to its claims of reason and dignity than a certain congregation of about 1,000 Americans who have been gathering afternoons and evenings lately in Cleveland to take part in a religious cult known as the Great I Am.

Ordinarily anyone who derides the religious faith or rites of any group is venturing on to dangerous ground; but the members of this cult, not being legally insane, have deliberately become accessories to the most revolting travesty in the entire record of religious eccentricity in the United States.

The leader is one G. W. Ballard, who has invented a list of saints and demons and who asserted in a local broadcast the other evening that one of his holy spirits had taken the liberty of destroying with a sword of flame a number of foreign submarines bent on the destruction of America. Scoop!

Cult Heads On Way To Nation's Capital

THIS SAINT was identified as the great ascended spirit, K-17, and Ballard had the gall to announce to normal people who were listening to the radio that K-17 had removed from these submarines certain capsules containing plans for the destruction of this country, the details of which would be revealed in due course.

He also had private advices that the ascended spirits, using the same weapon, had just routed a flight of Japanese bombers attacking a city in China. This was another scoop.

The headquarters of the cult, naturally, are in Los Angeles, but Ballard and his wife, a rugged, opinionated woman with a nagging voice and an inexhaustible tongue, have operated in Chicago and are bound for Philadelphia and Washington after they have mopped up in Cleveland.

They travel de luxe, maintain a stable of expensive yellow automobiles and carry a staff whose duties include the sale of literature, phonograph records and pictures and the forcible ejection of infidels who jangle the mood of the screwball devotion with heretical raspberries.

The Books Contain Amazing Gibberish

WHEN I PICKED up a sheaf of booklets to confirm in print what I had heard in bewilderment from the platform one of the brothers stepped up and said. "That will be just $1.60." My books contain the most astonishing gibberish, but in an unwonted way are worth the money.

One, for example, claims that St. Germain, the No. 1 or boss man of the host of great ascended spirits in one embodiment, worked continually for the "upliftment" of England and wrote the works of William Shakespeare. It is now revealed in this writ for the first time that St. Germain concealed within the very name of Will Shakespeare a code message signifying that it was the will of the Great I Am to shake the spear of wisdom at the darkness of ignorance. So help me God, it is!

Ballard and his wife take turns on the platform babbling such incoherent stuff about black magicians, gas belts in the earth, cataclysms, purifying flames and a lake of gold within a mountain as surely never has been heard outside a madhouse.

Books, Records Net Neat Profit

THE PICTURES on sale range in price from $1.20 to $15.

The $2.50 number is a hand-colored etching of Jesus, a minor character in the I Am Deity, drawn from life as he stood conversing with the tall master from Venus on a mountain in California, January 1, 1935. This, incidentally, seems to be another exclusive if belated and indirect revelation, and city editors are advised to check.

The phonograph records and the old man's bound books sell for $5 each.

Speaking with a slight brogue like Father Coughlin's, Ballard says "tremendjous," sometimes uses the singular verb with the plural noun and invokes the cosmic light, united flame and the sacred three times three to remove all strike agitators, abolish all debt and prevent the publication of false reports about the Great I Am.

Ballard's followers are obviously not poor, possess a deceptive outward appearance of intelligence and include an as yet uncertain person in comfortable circumstances who claims to have made himself invisible one day last week. He knows he was invisible because his pet cat, coming into the room where he sat invisible, didn't purr and rub against his legs, as it usually does, and therefore must have been unable to see him.

Ballard bought $1,600 worth of radio time in Cleveland and must have done all right.

A Sit-Down War

By Barnet Nover

Besieged Germany

THE UTTERLY STRANGE character of the present conflict in Europe arises out of the circumstance that it is static rather than dynamic in its nature. It is not a war of movement, as were the wars of the nineteenth century and, more recently, the Sino-Japanese, Italo-Ethiopian and German-Polish struggles.

The present war is, on the contrary, a sit-down war or, to use an older term, a siege, and a siege in which the economic, psychological and diplomatic aspects are as important as the military.

THE FIRST WORLD WAR was also a siege. It became a siege with the Battle of the Marne in September, 1914, and it remained a siege for the duration of the conflict. And it was their successful application of siege tactics rather than brilliant strategy in the field which won the war for the Allies.

Indeed, had the Allies realized the nature of the war they were then waging, they would have been spared millions of lives uselessly lost in frontal attacks on strong positions. But Allied commanders having been trained in older schools of combat never reconciled themselves to static warfare, but forever tried to transform the war of trenches into a war of movement.

They are not making that mistake now. They began this war where they left off in 1918. And they have been moved to employ the siege strategy not only by the lessons they learned from the blood-letting of a quarter of a century ago, but also by the realization that Germany's defensive position is, if anything, even greater than was her position in 1914. Thus Gen. Gamelin, instead of applying the tactics of Joffre and Foch, is going back a couple of centuries to the principles of siege warfare taught by Sebastian le Prestre de Vauban, a great builder of fortifications and an equally great master of siegecraft.

THE ALLIED problem has two aspects. In the first place they must treat Germany as a besieged fortress which, while impregnable to frontal attack at the outset, will become more and more vulnerable as its resources are exhausted. That means keeping the Reich from replenishing her supplies from the outside.

In the second place they must always be on their guard against a sortie from the beleaguered enemy and be prepared to beat it off. At the same time it is absolutely essential for them to keep their own lines of communication open, the supplies they need from the outside steadily coming in. In other words, if the siege is to be successful, the besiegers must not themselves become besieged.

THE PROBLEM facing Germany is the very reverse of that facing the Allies. She must, in the first place, do everything possible to see that the army manning the defenses and the population behind the lines have plentiful supplies. That means developing her internal resources to the full. Since that may not be enough to enable her to withstand the siege, it also means tapping whatever outside sources are available either through an exchange of goods with neighboring nations or by conquest.

Germany is also under compulsion to try and break the siege as soon as possible, either by a successful sortie or by, in some way or other, laying siege to her enemies.

WITH THIS PICTURE of the problem facing both sides in mind, it is possible to achieve a better understanding of what has happened since the present war began as well as anticipating some of the developments that may occur before the struggle reaches its termination.

Secure behind the Maginot Line the Allies have done very little in a military way. Aside from a few tentative feelers in the direction of the Westwall their position has been wholly defensive. But they have by no means limited their action to defensive measures alone.

In the naval sphere they have sought to clear German ships off the seas. This they have largely accomplished. The Allies have also launched a counterattack against submarine warfare which, if not curbed, would leave them in a besieged position. Diplomatically their efforts have taken the form of building barriers around the Reich so as to prevent her from acquiring raw material and foodstuff resources through conquest.

The Anglo-French-Turkish agreement may prove an extremely important means to that end. And diplomacy has further been reinforced by the financial weapon. The Allies are seeking to buy up the surpluses of Germany's neighbors so as to prevent Germany from acquiring them. By means of propaganda they have sought to sap the morale of the people in the beleaguered Reich by driving a wedge between themselves and their rulers.

IN SO FAR as the Allied blockade remains unbroken, Germany's only prospect of success can arise either through a break-through in the west or the destruction of the blockade by an aerial and submarine offensive.

Could both of these tactics be employed simultaneously, and with sufficient force, a German victory might soon result. It is doubtful if Germany has the strength at one and the same time for the application of blitzkrieg methods against the British fleet and an overpowering attack on the Maginot Line.

Germany, too, must husband her resources and use them in whatever direction they might have the greatest effect. Tentatively she has tried both forms of attack.

There was the trial offensive of some days ago which resulted in the recapture of territory previously lost to France. More important, there has been the submarine campaign and the air attacks on British battleships. But neither device has so far revealed potentialities of instant success, even if employed with many times the force Germany used in these dress rehearsals.

This does not mean that Germany, like the Allies, will depend indefinitely on waiting tactics. The Allies can afford to sit still. Germany cannot do so. Sooner or later she must strike as Hitler has threatened to do. But the circumstances that this threat has so far not been carried out shows the degree of uncertainty that obtains in Berlin regarding the present military and diplomatic situation.

Tension Relaxes

By Ernest K. Lindley

War Fever Subsides

THE CHANGE in attitude toward the European war, as observed in Washington during the last six weeks, has been almost miraculous. Tension has been relaxed. The war fever has been subsiding. Responsible persons who were saying not long ago that we could not keep out of the war for more than six months or a year are now averring that they see no reason why we can't keep out indefinitely.

The Gallup polls and other reflections of public opinion indicate that in this respect Washington is in accord with the sentiments of the country at large. Perhaps it has cooled off a little more slowly than the country at large, for the belief that we could not keep out of a European war, if it occurred, and the urge to intervene in transatlantic affairs have been much more intense in the Roosevelt Administration, I think, than in the rank and file of American citizens.

Sentiment Change Causes Are Listed

WHAT HAS CAUSED this rapid shift in sentiment? In asking that question during the last week of assorted politicians, members of the Administration, newspapermen, and visitors to Washington from various parts of the country, this correspondent has received the following answers:

1. The war is "phoney." Some of the implications of this charge are, of course, unjust. Perhaps "sensible" would be a more just word. Among the declared belligerents, both sides shrink from a total war. Both desire to conserve their resources and their manpower. Since the destruction of Poland, it has been a kind of gentleman's war; a token war. There is ample reason for believing that neither the Germans, on one side, nor the British and French, on the other, want to fight it to a conclusion. But in the meanwhile the Anglo-French combination is relying on its most powerful weapon, a blockade by land and sea, and the Germans are striking directly at this blockade where it is more important and more vulnerable—on the sea.

2. The war is a "balance of power war," not one involving any great principle or interest precious to us. This has been high-lighted by the behavior of the Russians. Clearly their pact with the Germans has not resulted in fusing two great revolutionary movements, nor even in a military alliance. The Russians, so far, are playing their own game and doing so very successfully and primarily at the expense of Germany. The Fascist alliance, so-called, of Germany, Italy and Japan has been disrupted. The Italians seem to be moving gradually toward the Allied side, although whether they will land there remains an open question. The Japanese are free agents. This is not, as yet, a war between the Fascist states and the democracies. It is not a war between the "aggressors" and the "peace-loving" countries. Nor is it a war between the "haves" and the "have-nots," for the chief beneficiary so far has been one of the great "haves," Soviet Russia.

The Allies Are Not In Mortal Peril

3. The Allies, and, more particularly, Great Britain, the British Empire, and British sea power, are not in mortal peril. This is partly the obverse side of point No. 2. The triple threat to the British Empire—by Germany Japan and Italy—has not materialized. The Russian threat may develop, but it has not done so as yet. Still more clearly, the British will to resist has been established. The notion—spread quite as much by communists, liberals under the influence of communist thought, and League of Nations enthusiasts as by the Nazis—that the British, under Tory leadership, would not resist, has been disproven. Great Britain and France, it has become plain, are strong nations, commanding, through their empires and their financial, military and sea power, resources far beyond those under the control of Germany.

4. Other nations, with far greater stakes than ours in the outcome of this war, are making every effort to remain neutral, so far with success. These include not only Finland and the three Scandinavian nations, the Netherlands, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Rumania, Bulgaria and Greece but every one of the Latin-American republics, several of which have closer ties with Europe than we have.

U. S. Resurgence Of Self-Confidence

5. THAT CURIOUSLY fatalistic feeling that if a European war broke out we couldn't remain out of it long has been dissipated by a resurgence of American self-confidence. In reviving our confidence the so-called "isolationists" have been the principal agents.

6. The President and other spokesmen for the Administration have helped by asserting their determination to try to keep us out of war. Although they have followed public opinion—their leadership prior to the outbreak of war having been in the opposite direction—their help has been invaluable. In a sense it has been like a motion to cast a unanimous vote.

There may be other reasons rooted more deeply in our make-ups for this change in opinion during the last few weeks. The change may prove to be only a drop from the crest to the trough of a wave, to be followed by a rise to the crest of another wave, even higher. But the change has occurred, and it has come about with a rapidity which is extraordinary.

Nazi Offensive Through Neutral Holland Indicated

IN THE LAST fortnight persistent reports come from various European capitals, but mostly from Paris and The Hague, that Germany is apparently preparing for an offensive directed against the Allies, but particularly against Great Britain, through the Netherlands.

Walter Kerr reported from The Hague in the Herald Tribune on October 18 that the general staff of the Netherlands had received a gift from Berlin that caused them no little concern. It was a set of 15 German military maps, and the Nazis requested that the Netherlands reciprocate in kind by sending Berlin a set of its military maps. Mr. Kerr reported that the Dutch replied that they had no extra maps.

Edgar Mowrer reported in the Chicago Daily News on the same day that 30 of 65 German divisions mobilized in the west are standing opposite Belgium and Holland. He concludes that a German attack seems likely to follow the famous Von Epp plan, according to which Belgium would be invaded across southern Holland in a district which cannot be flooded. He does not conclude that the Germans have decided to make such an offensive, but points out that they are certainly in a position to make one.

A Buffer State Between Enemies

OTHER REPORTS indicate that the Dtuch are preparing for the worst. Canals are 5 feet above the normal level, ready for flood operation, and the air bases of the Netherlands have been moved westward.

What is apparently the German technique, obvious in their propaganda, of playing down the war with France and making Great Britain enemy No. 1, is no comfort to the Netherlands.

For the Netherlands is a buffer state between Germany and England in time of war. If the Germans believe themselves unable to break through the Maginot Line or to withstand the British blockade, a drive through Holland would bring German bombers 100 miles nearer to England and give Germany submarine bases almost on England's shores.

This plan came very near being carried out by the Germans in the last war. The Kaiser actually prepared an ultimatum to the Netherlands, and only the exceptional diplomacy of the Queen managed to avert it.

The one thing that should, we think, deter Germany from such a step is world public opinion. In the case of the Netherlands the outrage would be even less defensible than was the violation of Belgium during the last war. For the ties between Belgium and France were very strong and the Germans could argue that if they did not invade Belgium the French would.

Dutch Are Content With What They Have

BUT THE POSITION of the Netherlands ever since the eighteenth century has strongly paralleled the isolationism of the United States. As far as they are concerned, the people of that country are content with what they have. They want no more territory in Europe or anywhere else, and they have absolutely refused to fight other people's wars. Their land and their sea position makes them peculiarly vulnerable, and they have had to defend their neutrality with courage and determination.

The Netherlands have an enlightened democratic government. They are in debt to nobody. During the last few years they have carried out measures of social welfare, particularly in the realm of housing, which are the admiration of the world.

Within the last decade they have added a province to their country—not by conquest, not by taking some one else's land, but by taking a province out of the retreating ocean. The draining of the Zuider Zee has been a reclamation project unequaled by any of the totalitarian powers, including Mussolini's draining of the Pontine Marshes.

In their colonies in the Far East the Netherlands have consistently maintained the policy of the open door. The resources there are available to anyone who want to buy them, and the Dutch East Indies are of great interest to the United States because they are the chief source of our rubber supply.

U. S. Condemnation Viewed As Certain

THEREFORE the violation of the Netherlands would, it is certain, be vehemently condemned by the United States out of sympathy, admiration and, more remotely, out of American self-interest, which could not profit by any change in the status quo.

It would be felt as an assault upon and a threat to all neutrals everywhere. The Dutch have minded their own business consistently for much more than a hundred years. They have done the job of governing themselves so well that they enjoy the position of a nation seldom visited by correspondents, because there is nothing to write about.

The last war cost the Netherlands as a neutral almost as much as it would have cost her as a belligerent, economically speaking. She had to contend with the British blockade. She suffered from both sides. But she pluckily kept her ships on the seas, took her frightful losses as part of the inevitable price that neutrals must pay when war is abroad on the earth, and kept out of war.

In fact, the one thing that Holland will fight for is the right not to be embroiled. There is not the slightest question that if she is invaded Holland will fight. Neither will she buy "protection." She will not give the Germans a right of way across Holland for any consideration whatsoever. There will not be any bloodless victories.

This holds for England as well as for Germany. But it is Germany that the Netherlands is worrying about at this moment, and not England. The British blockade is bitter, but invasion is worse.

Nazi Pledge Given To Respect Neutrality

IF WORDS of honor meant anything in the world any longer, there would be no reason for Holland to be disturbed. At the very outbreak of the war the German minister in The Hague formally and officially advised the government of the Netherlands that Germany would respect Dutch neutrality. The Dutch, no doubt, prefer to assume that the pledge was given in complete good faith. But they are also prepared for other eventualities, as the measures which they are taking show.

They have on their side that imponderable factor, a very large measure of international good will.

They have managed extraordinarily well in dealing with internal propaganda. The Nazi movement in Holland has been strongly subsidized and supported by the Germans, but the patriotism of the Dutch and the fact that this little country has enjoyed relative prosperity and remarkable social stability during all the social and economic disorders of the last 20 years have made it less pervious than most to any kind of subversive movement.

Totalitarian Idea Anathema To Dutch

IT HAS MANAGED to be socially progressive and financially conservative. The Nazi movement flared and quickly waned. The totalitarian idea is anathema to the Dutch, who never would tolerate interferences with certain basic freedoms. In an emergency they might accept the discipline of greatly increased authority, but would never accept the control of the state over religion, culture and the whole of private life.

Since the end of the wars with Britain in the eighteenth century, the Netherlands has maintained its isolation from the conflict of Europe, departing from it in only one instance—when the Netherlands joined the League of Nations. It is an open secret that Holland joined the League on the presumption that the United States, that other historical neutral, would also join. When the United States failed to do so the Netherlands, of all nations, was the most disappointed.

It is to be presumed that the German government is taking into account the inevitable reaction that would follow in all neutral countries should the Netherlands be invaded. The Nazis cannot be unaware of what the feeling in the United States would be.

Drought Takes Heavy Toll From Roosevelt's Farm

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 24 (AP).—From first-hand experience with his own estate, President Roosevelt has learned something of the problems of other farmers whose crops have been scourged by drought.

And, like many another farmer who has plowed up one ruined crop and optimistically planted another, Mr. Roosevelt is "taking it on the chin" this year and getting ready to attempt "a comeback" in the spring.

Not since April 17 has a soaking rain fallen on the President's acres. Throughout the area, many wells, lakes and streams have dried up.

The Chief Executive's principal crop is trees—Norwegian spruce for the Christmas trade, and not only have more than 30,000 of them been killed by long months of drought, but truck gardens—which supply the table at the big family home, provide food for employes of the place and feed crops for cattle and horses kept by the Roosevelts—likewise have felt effects of the drought.

Boys Clubs' Roll Gains, Says Fyfe

Attendance at the four branches of the Boys Club of Washington reached 342,769 in the first nine months of this year, compared with 439,116 for the same period of 1938, it was announced yesterday by Charles M. Fyfe, managing director.

The increase is due to expanding facilities "and a greater interest by the boys," it was stated. Dr. Raymond W. Murray has become the new chairman of the club's medical committee. Dr. Walter Teichman and Dr. J. O. Warfield have been added to the staff.

Swiss and Dutch Biggest Sufferers Among Neutrals

Geneva, Oct. 24 (AP).—A League of Nations bulletin giving the first general statistical study of how the world has been affected by the European war rshowed yesterday that Switzerland and Holland were the greatest neutral sufferers.

Swiss exports in September, as compared to August, dropped 54 per cent and Holland's 27 per cent, the bulletin said. Figures for Italy and Germany were not given for August and September.

China led the rest of the world in increases in both imports and exports with increases of 42 per cent for imports and 20 per cent for exports.

Next to China in export gains was the United States' 13 per cent increase in September over August.

Trujillo to Talk To Refugee Group

Gen. Rafael L. Trujillo, of the Dominican Army, will speak today at a luncheon of the President's Committee on Political Refugees at the Carlton Hotel.

James G. McDonald, chairman, told the committee at its meeting last week at the White House that the Dominican republic is one of the areas under consideration for refugee settlement.

Civic Ballet to Meet

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Father-Son Dialogue

"Tell me about the war situation, will you, popper?"

"Well, let us discuss the neutrals first. Take Russia . . ."

"But how can anybody take Russia as a neutral?"

"Don't interrupt me, son!"

"Russia sent troops into Poland. A country can't be neutral and take sides, can it, popper?"

"You're old-fashioned. A country can't be neutral in the language of today and NOT take sides. Now, as I said, let's take Russia. . . ."

"But didn't Russia sign a pact with the enemies of Poland?"

"What's a pact? It's like a license plate. You change it every little while. You don't even have to have the front number correspond with the rear number, internationally speaking."

"But Russia has even taken land from the Poles. Can a neutral do that?"

"Ask Poland, my boy, ask Poland. You'd be surprised what a neutral can do these days. It can do anything except be neutral."

"Popper, is Italy neutral?"

"Italy is the very essence of modern neutrality. She has developed it to a high form of art. Every day she announces how neutral she is and in between announcements Mussolini's newspapers blast away at England and France, calling them horse thieves and second-story workers, while playing up Germany as Little Goody Twoshoes of nursery rime fame."

"I thought Italy had signed up as an Axis partner of Hitler."

"That's right."

"Well, has she repudiated that pact, popper?"

"No."

"Then, as a partner of Hitler, how can she say she is not a partner of Hitler and be consistent?"

"Who said anything about being consistent? It's an obsolete word in foreign affairs. You can get shot for calling anybody consistent in days like these, my son."

"Popper, if the Allies declared war on Germany over Poland, how can they fail to declare war on Russia, now that Russia has been exposed as a partner in the exploit? Logically, I should think . . ."

"There's another obsolete word—logically. It's not used any more. Why should the Allies declare war on anybody? Declaring war is also an obsolete custom. You don't declare war these days; you just wage war and call it an act of friendship. That's why this war is so slow getting under way."

"What do you mean, popper?"

"The mere fact that England and France came right out and declared war has stupfied Germany, Russia, Italy, Japan and almost everybody else. They just can't understand it!"

Picture Story of Seizure Of Freighter City of Flint

She was seized presumably in the area indicated by cross, after picking up the crew of the sunken British ship Stonegate, and was taken along the course of the heavy line to Tromso, Norway, where it was reported, the British crew was discharged. From there the German prize crew sailed her to Murmansk under the swastika

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Don't Believe All You Hear From Faddists About Diet Systems

THERE are a number of peculiar, pseudo-scientific systems of dieting. Self-styled experts and "doctors" will assure you that you are the magnesium type. Or the potasium type. Or, that silicon will bring out your personality! All of which is pure bunk. Nothing brings out your personality like a good, balanced diet.

Don't let anyone try to sell you the idea that fasting will remove the poisons from your system and improve your health as you lose weight. Quite the contrary! When you fast long enough, the body begins to feed on itself. The wanton destruction of the tissues produces a toxic condition—acidosis.

While you are about it, beware the raw food proponent. Raw food is excellent in the menu, but not as the entire menu. It will not cure anything that may be wrong with you and it may cause colitis.

Panaceas Fantastic

Some of these fadists are strong for "elimination" diets. They eliminate from the diet practically everything you should have. One person has converted thousands of women, and some of them very intelligent and charming women, not only to the elimination diet, but to the use of garlic for whatever ails them. It is hard to believe that anyone would fall for such a fantastic panacea.

A few years back, so-called experts were doing such a land-office business of wrecking health that the United States Government warned the public against them. And the American Medical Association is constantly informing the public that many of them have no valid claim to their titles of doctor.

You should never be fooled by such claims as this: "Yields quick energy but is never fattening." Any food is as fattening as the energy it yields. If taken in excess of your caloric requirement, it will make you add weight.

As to Calories

And any food is slimming in proportion to the number of calories it enables you to leave out of the menu. Even the low calorie foods will not make you slim—but you can eat more of them without exceeding your reducing requirement. If you take a glass of grape juice for 160 calories it is better for your reducing purposes than taking a slice of pie for 300-odd calories. You can also have a glass of milk for 160 calories. Or a glass of skim milk for 80 calories. You could have a glass of water for no calories, but neither would get you the food elements you must have.

Beauty Secret of a Debutante

Luncheons, bazaars, cocktails, teas, Junior League meetings are only a surface list of activities engrossing the debutante this season. Like other busy girls and matrons, she only gets time to make up once a day. Here is a pretty debutante who manages to look "perfect" at all hours. A little bottle of liptone, a liquid lipstick, is her secret for it is easily applied, indelible, and keeps lips soft and bright for an indefinite time. Smoothed on with an applicator from a bottle of tropic, regal, scarlet, or a variety of carmine hues, the liptone can be removed with a special eradicator in a wink

Metal Jewelry Expected as War Cuts Off Gems

Hollywood, Calif.—Since strife in Europe has cut off America's source of cut gems, Milo Anderson, Warner Bros. designer, predicts a season of all-metal jewelry which will be so artistically wrought it will win a hearty welcome from women of fashion.

All types of precious and semi-precious metal will be used in the new pieces and frequently three or four varieties will go into a single article.

Up until now the United States imported most of its cut stones from Czecho-Slovakia and its fine paste pieces from France. Although ceramic jewelry has been made in this country it has been cheaply and inelegantly done.

The Gentler Sex

The Patriots

"Think you'll go to Palm Beach this winter?"

"No, I'm staying here. With things the way they are in Europe, I just don't think it's right to go away."

"Neither do I. You never can tell when you might be needed. And after all it's not so terribly extreme here in winter—if you have plenty of good furs."

"I suppose you're busy rolling bandages?"

"Well, I haven't done much yet. I dont seem to have much knack at that. You know I'd like to get into something a little more—well, more creative . . . like knitting or making scrapbooks."

"I don't like the chapter I'm in. I want to get transferred to Mrs. Bellwether's."

"Yes, everybody's in that chapter. Now in the group I meet with—why, I never heard of half the women."

"I think they really ought to organize a motor corps here."

"Yes. Now that's something I'd really like to get into. The outdoor air is so much better for you."

"Yes, and they always have awfully smart uniforms."

"Still, I don't think those uniforms the English women are wearing are very snappy, do you?"

"No, but the English never do have any style."

"You know—if the worst came to the worst—I'd like to do something overseas . . . like writing or entertaining . . . or even nursing."

So would I. So I would really feel I was helping."

"Well of course I hope this country doesn't get into it, but just the same, I think we all ought to be prepared to do something. That's why I've taken up my voice lessons again."

"You know what I'm thinking of doing? Taking lessons on the banjo!"

"That's a good idea. I've enrolled in a gymnasium class. I really think it's our duty to keep as fit as possible in a time like this."

"Well, I'm walking regularly a mile a day now. And I'm going to start in really following my diet."

"That's another thing I'm going to do. But it seems as if I've just been so busy."

"Did you ever see so many parties?"

"No, but I think it's a fine thing. I know I read somewhere that everybody ought, as a matter of patriotism, to keep social life going along as usual."

"Yes, I really think it's our patriotic duty to have a good time. Besides, it takes people's minds off things."

"Well I can't go many more places unless I get some new evening clothes."

"Say, I need a dinner dress and I really ought to have a new formal—though I really can't afford it."

"Well I read somewhere that it was women's duty at a time like this to dress up as much as possible, especially for evening—to keep up the morale of the men."

"I think that's exactly right; Men want to forget the war. You know I believe I'll go and look at formals."

"I really ought to look at evening wraps. I simply need everything—slippers . . . and a sequin bag . . . and a necklace . . . and some hair ornaments . . . and—say, do you remember what that perfume is the Duchess of Windsor uses?"

Budget Your Income Wisely

A REVELATION to those starting to budget—how much money they really have for things they want.

Many think that the "big three"—rent, food and clothes—take up so much of the family income that only scraps are left. But unless you are excessively extravagant about those three, you should have as much as 39 per cent of your income left! That's $62.40 margin if your income's $160 a month!

What happens to that money, you wonder? A hazy check over the past month gives an idea.

You simply had to buy some new goblets, give two wedding gifts. Then there was that rug sale. No wonder you had to dip into the bank account to pay music tuition for daughter—and couldn't afford that new club membership.

Leaving such matters to chance is like sailing without a compass. You never know where you are!

On a budget you set aside each month about $24 of your "margin" for running your house. Thus you take care of replacements, pay seasonal fuel bills and other items without upsetting your entire finances.

To an Advancement Fund you give about $22.40, and this most important fund you divide according to your needs and desires.

Education for your children may take the larger share, but wise to allow part of it for such social items as gifts, an occasional recreational spree. And you still have $16 of your margin for savings.

No matter what your income, you get more out of it when you budget. Our 40-page booklet, "How to Budget Your Income," shows how it's done. Tells how to plan your spending, stop leaks. Has sample budgets of real people, showing various scales of living.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Budget Your Income," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Girl Who Earns More Money Than Fiance Asks Whether, or How, to Make This Fact Known to Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am one of the many Government girls in this town who earns more than her boy friends. While it had never concerned me until recently, it is now rapidly becoming a major source of worry. The boy I want to marry has finally arrived on the scene. He, too, is employed by Uncle Sam, and like so many other men, his position is more important than his salary. He is going ahead rapidly and has received two pay increases in the last few months, but even so, he collects a little less than I do each pay day.

I am proud of his ambitions and his willingness to work hard to reach his goal. In all the time we have gone together, he has never questioned me on the salary I make. On the other hand, he told me immediately what he earned and what his future prospects are. I felt, somehow, that the fact that I make more than he does—little as it is—might injure his self-respect, if he knew about it. Moreover, he has confessed that, "manlike" (to use his word), he wouldn't want to think he was incapable of earning more than his wife. I realized then that I had to be careful of his pride and self confidence, and that I could easily hurt him by admitting that I earn more than he does.

We are planning to be married soon and I am in a real quandry as to whether—or how—I should tell him that I earn over $100 more a year than he does. I have always told him the truth and have never had the desire to conceal anything from him. I should like our respective lives always to be open to each other—and yet, they say white lies are forgiven. What can I do to preserve his pride and yet not deceive him? Should I perhaps tell him that I just received a raise and thereby make him work harder for his next raise? Or shall I let him think that I receive the same salary that he does? I feel confident in your decision. Sincerely. GOVERNMENT GIRL.

Unimportant Difference Need Not Be Emphasized

DEAR G. G.: The difference of approximately $100 per annum in pay checks is so negligible as to be virtually non-existent and since your beau is "going ahead rapidly and has received two pay increases in the last few months," it is logical to suppose that his annual earnings probably will equal and perhaps surpass yours within another year. In my opinion, therefore, it would be pointless to declare the trifling difference now—particularly since you have reason to think that his knowledge of the exact figures at this time would wound his self-respect.

In candidly confessing the amount of his salary, and in discussing his "future prospects," unquestionably it was the man's intention to reassure you of his ability to provide, rather than to brag about his current cash value in the market place. And since—quite properly—you wish to "preserve his pride and yet not deceive him," it seems to me the graceful way to meet the needs of the situation is to appraise his professional value at its potential or eventual worth, both in your own mind and in your discussions with him. By so doing, your current troubled awareness of the no doubt purely transient phenomenon of your slightly larger pay check will automatically vanish into thin air.

Frankly, I think you are making a mountain out of a molehill. As I dope this thing out, you are receiving approximately $10 more a month than the man. It seems to me that this wholly insignificant difference might have been implied—without any of the aspects of a bolt from the blue—when finances first came up for discussion. Supposing you sensed, then, that failure to declare—or, at least, to hint at—the truth, might be construed as deceit, if and when the exact figures came to light, you could have made some casual, inconsequential, indirect reference to your income.

You might have said, for instance, "They pay pretty well in our department, but of course the chances for advancement are limited." Or you could have said, "Well, $2,500 a year (or whatever) is about as much as I can ever expect to make in my line of work, and I'm making that now, so I'm afraid my future is all behind me. I certainly do envy you your abilities and opportunities, etc." In my opinion, it is not the truth of the current situation which might hurt the man's feelings, so much as your attitude toward the existent figures might.

Abandon the notion of telling a falsehood, either about your present salary or about having received an alleged recent increase in pay. Such deceit is not warranted. It would be attaching morbid significance to something that is essentially unimportant. Also, it would be dangercus. It would be better for the man to know the truth, even at transient pain to his pride, than that he should be worried by evidence that you are capable of deliberate deceit—as he would be if circumstances ever disclosed the "white lie."

Let the matter ride until and unless he asks a direct question, which he is not likely to do. But if he does, say casually that you are getting about what he gets, with no present increases and none in view, or something of the kind, and then switch the conversation to other fields or perhaps to a happy consideration of his future prospects.

future prospects. M. H.

Covered-up Look Becomes Motif Of New Dresses

Sports dresses with softly flaring or goered skirts and luscious evening gowns of rich fabrics with hobble skirts have one thing in common—the covered-up look. The covered-up look was the predominant theme of the afternoon, dinner, evening and sports frocks shown at a recent promenade of local store Jane Engel fashions in the Pall Mall Room of the Raleigh Hotel.

Many of the afternoon and evening dresses showed zippers either in front or back. Some could be zipped from collar to hemline. One afternoon dress of black brocade satin had high shoulders, collarbone neckline and was zipped all the way in front. Besides the princess line, the long corset effect was seen. Nearly all the dresses had draped waist or other intricate detailing.

Black, red and gold were shown in a few combinations. Fuchsia held its own in the elaborate bustle frocks. A gold green color was introduced in sports wear.

Migrating Birds Find Empire State Building a Menace

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The other day I went up to visit my pal from the Old South, Mrs. Julia Chandler, who manages the observation platform at the peak of the Empire State Building—way up. She's sad at this time of year, for hundreds of migratory birds, heading South on misty days, get confused by the presence of that unbelievable peak, butt their pretty heads against it, and become just that many more victims of the fatal city. Such has just occurred to a mass flight of birds. And wise, vicious hawks seem to know this, and wait for the hapless pilgrims. Julia is very unhappy, but what can she do about it? . . .

Estelle Taylor, the beautiful dark girl who was a star of silent movies and then the wife of Jack Dempsey, rang three nights at our Versailles night club. Then came in Gertrude Niesen, with the amazing voice. Gertie has been a big London hit the last two years—but I'll make a small bet she'll stay on this side for the present.

I saw Vicki Baum, the other day—the Teuton who got famous with "Grand Hotel." Right now she's readying for rehearsals of her new play, "Summer Night"—the first job she has ever written in English. Even her newest novel, "Shanghai '37" was written first in German. She says she likes the experience with the new tongue, but that it is difficult and tricky for her . . .

Mr. and Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart, real people about town, are back at the first nights and supper clubs, after the beauteous blonde missus had her first baby, a little girl. Her figger is even more "scrumptious" than ever . . .

U. S. May Buy Stored Apples After Harvest

Program Continuance By Surplus Agency Viewed Likely

Winchester, Va., Oct. 24.—A possibility that Federal purchases might continue indefinitely was seen here today after members of the regional committee reported the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation probably would continue its surplus-purchase program with cold-storage fruit after the close of the harvest season this week.

The corporation, which is buying apples in the Appalachian area direct from packing sheds, set out to acquire at least 10,000,000 bushels of fresh fruit in the various producing States. Prices being paid this week in Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, as set by the four-State committee, range from 75 cents downward to 50 cents a bushel.

The harvest season will end in this area this week, except for isolated instances. Local storages now are holding a total of 1,755,000 bushels of apples and it is expected these will be increased to about 2,000,000 bushels by the close of the week.

Occidental Loses Prestige in Orient, Says Missionary

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Oct. 24.—The Christian Church in China today faces its greatest opportunity, but there are not enough workers in the field, the Rev. Alexander Paul, of Indianapolis, executive secretary of the department of Oriental missions, said tonight in an addres at the international convention of the Disciples of Christ.

He predicted the church will lose much of its freedom of action as a result of the Sino-Japanese war.

"Never again wil the Oriental admit that the westerner is superior to the Oriental," he said. "Today the intelectual leaders are denying that the countries which are Christian have higher ideals or moral standards than the so-called non-Christian lands."

Keep Eye Open For Espionage, FBI Chief Asks

J. E. Hoover, However, Does Not Want to See a 'Witch Hunt'

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 24.—J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, appealed today to the public to watch for "any suspected act of sabotage, espionage, or neutrality violation," but urged that such vigilance not be permitted to "develop into a witch hunt."

"Every sincere and earnest American," he said in a speech at the ninth annual New York Herald Tribune forum on current problems, "should consider himself an integral part of law and order in this war against the enemies of democracy."

He said, however:

"Bands of vigilantes, no matter in what manner they act, or what high ideals they may proclaim, are un-American, unpatriotic and subversive."

214 Complaints a Day

Hoover said the FBI was receiving complaints of espionage, sabotage and neutrality violations "at the rate of approximately 214 a day."

Today's discussions were under the topic "The Home Front."

Stanley High, one of the founders of the "Good Neighbor League" which aided the Roosevelt re-election campaign in 1936, suggested the establishment of a six months' deadline after which all aliens save those seeking citizenship would be deported. He proposed that the German-American bund and the Communist Party of the United States be "legally abolished."

Mrs. Roosevelt Not Afraid

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt remarked that she herself was "not afraid of talking to a Communist or meeting a Communist."

"I believe," she added, "in my inward power to work for democracy, and for it to work for other people."

"We have heard a great deal about aliens today," she said at another point. "I confess I believe most of what I have heard."

But, she went on, "I think it is important that we beware (in connection with movements of supposed alien control) lest in suppressing them we also suppress some of our own freedom.

"I think it most important that we keep our own power to really look into things—to get at the truth and not just use words and catchy phrases."

Major Illegally Held, Court Says

An army retirement board which finds an officer to be insane may remove him from duty, but has no legal right to send him to an institution, Justice Proctor ruled yesterday. Justice Proctor granted a writ of habeas corpus to a major in the Air Corps for release from St. Elizabeths Hospital, where he was confined in 1936.

Justice Proctor said he was obliged to find that the officer was technically held without due process of law. Since the man was shown to be of unsound mind, the justice said, the order for his release would not be signed until November 3. Proctor suggested the authorities act before then.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 24.—Baby Strawn, the tenth of her line, cooed and cried today at her 12 foster mothers in Strawn Cottage, ood College home management house, where the students are taught the practical aspects of home management.

Hood College was one of the first women's colleges to give home-economic students practical experience in child care by taking a baby to live at Strawn Cottage, and nine other "adopted" babies have added their mite to the college education of home-economics students in past years. The tenth is Frances Strawn, 8 months old, blonde and rather shy.

Miss Onica Prall, assistant professor of home economics at the college, is in charge of Strawn Cottage, where the nursery occupies a portion of the three-story colonial building. Twelve seniors live, prepare their own meals and plan for the baby there.

The students work out a schedule by which each girl has an opportunity to supervise the baby's routine. Each girl acts as "mother" for a week, during which time she is responsible for preparing the child's food, and for feeding, bathing and weighing the baby. She also makes out a schedule for the girl who will take care of the infont while the "mother" is in clossroom. A record is kept of the child's physical, mental and social development, and periodically it is given simple performance tests.

Montgomery Cafe Man Faces 2d Beer Trial

Log Cabin Inn Owner Freed and Rearrested, Drops Zoning Request

Acquitted in the morning on a charge of selling beer without a license, Peter Fritz, proprietor of the Log Cabin Inn, was arrested late yesterday on the same charge in an amended warrant.

Later, former State's Attorney James H. Pugh, attorney for Fritz, issued a statement announcing that, because of "persecution" of his client by the State, the pending zoning application of Fritz, set for public hearing tomorrow night, will be withdrawn temporarily.

Fritz was arrested for the second time by Chief of Police Charles M. Orme, by direction of State's Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson. He was released on $500 bond for appearance November 3 before Trial Magistrate Ralph G. Shure in Silver Spring police court.

Magistrate Shure earlier in the day had ruled that the warrant charged a violation under a law which had been repealed in a 1939 statute which set up a new law. The warrant also failed to specify a date upon which the alleged violation had been committed, Attorney Pugh brought out in moving for dismissal.

Civic Leaders Watch

Later, State's Attorney Wilkinson, pointing out that a person tried under a faulty indictment could be tried again under a valid one, ruled that warrants are in the same class and directed that the new warrant be issued for Fritz.

Fritzz was arrested Saturday night by Chief of Police Orme. Testimony at the trial showed Orme had gone to the Log Cabin Inn and ordered two bottles of beer, but failed to show he had paid for the beer, and Chief Orme admitted on cross-examination that the waiter did not give him the beer, that he took it from a tray.

The Montgomery County Civic Federation and other civic groups have been opposing granting of the Fritz petition, contending that it would be "spot" zoning. The hearing was scheduled for 7:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Liquor Control Board Building.

Several leaders of the federation were present in court yesterday when the Fritz charge was dismissed.

Judge Charles W. Woodward ruled yesterday in county circuit court that the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board does not have exclusive right to vend beer at the county. But he declined to grant an injunction to Eugene J. C. Raney, wholesale beer dealer, to restrain the board from collecting a handling charge on beer sold by Raney.

The court sustained a demurrer filed by the liquor board to Raney's suit alleging that the acts of interference were not specific, but granted 15 days for filing of an amended complaint.

Judge Woodward also refused to order refund of $672 paid by Raney for handling charges, ruling that the liquor board had the right to set its own price for resale. He also ruled that Raney was not forced to purchase through the board.

The court declared that "it would be pure folly" to contend that a wholesale dealer who had paid $233.34 for a State wholesaltrs' license would be "allowed to sell beer to retail dealers and at the same time prohibit those retail dealers from selling any beer except that bought from the control board."

Officials Study Ruling

The court summarized his opinion as follows:

"That the plaintiff under his license is authorized to buy beer from a 'manufacturer,' a 'wholesaler,' the Liquor Control Board or to import it.

"That he is authorized to sell beer at wholesale to any licensed retail dealer in Montgomery County.

"That the Liquor Control Board of Montgomery County is authorized to sell beer to all licensed dealers in Montgomery County who are authorized to resell beer.

"That the Control Board can sell beer at such prices as may be determined by the board.

"That licensed retail beer dealers are authorized to buy and in turn to sell beer purchased by them from the plaintiff, other wholesale beer licenses, or from the control board."

'Take It or Leave It' Policy Adopted for Road Land Deals

O'Conor Attacks Antiquated Maryland Condemnation Laws for Stalling Projects; Moves to Accelerate Highway Building

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 24.—Adoption of a "take it or leave it" policy by the State roads commission in dealing with owners of land needed for State roads was announced today by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor.

The Governor said he was informed that Maryland's antiquated condemnation laws and the prior policy of the roads commission in negotiating at length in efforts to purchase needed property had stalled numerous vital projects for anmy months.

In the future, O'Conor said, roads commission experts will set a "reasonable" value on the land needed. That offer, and no other, will be made to the owner. Refusal of the offer will be followed by institution of immediate condemnation proceedings.

"I have recommended that the legislative council prepare amendments to the present condemnation law for the submission to the 1941 Legislature," the Governor said. "Pending that, however, this new policy will speed up the acquisition of needed property."

The new condemnation program was the latest development in the reorganization of the roads commission office decreed by O'Conor and Commission Chairman Ezra B. Whitman in an effort to prevent recurrence of delays which have already frozen $3,000,000 in Federal funds ear-marked for Maryland roads.

Earlier in the day O'Conor said the roads commission was installing a "tattle-tale" project progress file which would chart day-to-day progress on the 21 construction jobs already authorized.

D. C. Prison Head Attributes Crime To Thrill, Not Cash

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 24 (AP).—Crime is a young man's job, Ray Huff, head of the District of Columbia Reformatory at Lorton, Va., told the closing session of the Piedmont convocation of Episcopal churches today, and is "committed not so much for money, but for excitement—a feeling of achievement."

He opened his address with the statement that 20,000 persons were admitted to the Lorton institution last year. The prisoners, he said, conducted their own church.

The Rev. Charles W. Lowrey, jr., professor of theology at the Episcopal Seminary, Alexandria, Va., spoke on "German Public Opinion Prior to the Outbreak of the War." The Rev. Leigh Ribble, of Falls Church, dean of the convocation, presided over a business session.

McDaniels, Baxter Land; Set Plane Endurance Record

Muncie, Ind., Oct. 24 (AP).—Bewhiskered, leg weary Robert A. McDaniels, 25, of Muncie and Kelvin F. Baxter, 23, of nearby Richmond, brought their yellow and black monoplane to a bumpy landing at 6:38 p. m. (C. S. T.) last night, establishing a new light land airplane endurance record of 535 hours and 45 minutes.

The Hoosier fliers bettered the 343-hour mark established this summer by Humphrey and Hunter Moody, at Springfield, Ill., but were more than 100 hours short of the open endurance record of 653 hours and 30 minutes set in 1935 by Fred and Al Keys, of Meridian, Miss.

Baxter and McDaniels claim their mark will stand for light land planes. They contend Wes Carroll and Clyde Schleipper of Long Beach, Cal., who still are in the air and with approximately 48 hours more flying time, will have a record for seaplanes since their ship is equipped with pontoons.

Mother Denies Being a Wife, Seeks Wages

Asks $6,600, Claims Her Child's Father Was Employer

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Oct. 24.—Christine Rogers, a Virginia girl (King George County) argued before the court of appeals today that she was an employe of the late William T. Garrison, Baltimore, when she bore his son, and was not his common law wife.

The unusual argument came up when Miss Rgers defended her right to a $6,600 verdict for back wages against Garrison's estate, returned in the Baltimore superior court.

Charles Allan Lynch, administrator of Garrison's estate, appealed the verdict on the ground that Miss Rogers was Garrison's common law wife, and hence debarred from collecting wages.

Evidence in the case showed Miss Rogers went to live in Garrison's home in 1928 when she was 19 years old. She was then making $10 a week in a candy factory, and testified Garrison agreed "to pay her more than that."

She testified she subsequently bore him a son, now of school age, and that Garrison frequently assured her the child would be educated. She said Garrison forged a marriage certificate, which she signed to show her parents in Virginia, and that she signed purchase contracts as his wife at his insistence.

She insisted, however, that she was his employe throughout the 10 years, and asked $15 a week as compensation on Garrison's promise to "pay her more" than the $10 she was making at the candy factory. "It is true that she did have a child by him; but this fact alone is not sufficient to bar her from enforcing her claim for compensation for the housekeeping services she rendered him," her brief reads.

Marshall's Law Order Discovered

Right to Practice Given Great Justice Despite Low Funds

By the Associated Press

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 24.—The original court order permitting 14 young attorneys, among them James Monroe, fifth President of the United States, and John Marshall, noted early Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, to practice law in Fredericksburg "on credit" has been discovered among old corporation court records.

Neither Monroe, Marshall or their 12 colleagues could pay the bar admission tax of £15 when they appeared in a body "at a court held at the Town House" April 30, 1789. The same day George Washington took the oath as first President of the new Nation.

Because the amount of the tax had previously been "agitated in the Richmond District Court and by them adjourned to the General Court," the two judges, James Mercer and Richard Parker, declined to render a decision. They held the question in abeyance pending a ruling by the general court.

But so as not to deprive the youthful applicants of any fees they might earn in the meantime, the presiding judges permitteid them to take the oath and "practice in this court subject to such tax as the General Court are of the opinion ought to be paid."

No further referencet to the matter has been found.

Besides Monroe and Marshall, the group included:

Buchrod Washington, nephew of George Washington, wh obecame Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; John Taylor, U. S. Senator from Virginia; Robert Brooks, Governor of Virginia; Richard Brent, who represented Virginia in both Houses of Congress; John Francis Mercer, U. S. Representative from Maryland, and later Governor o fthat State; John T. Brooke, brother of Dr. Laurance Brooke, surgeon of John Paul Jones' flagship, "Bonhomme Richard;" William Waller Henning, an ancestor of the author of "Hennings' Statutes," noted law work.

More School Area Asked At Oxon Hill

100 in P.-T. A. Group Urging Immediate Purchase of 19 Acres of Ground

Purchase of additional playground space for students of Oxon Hill consolidated school was urged upon the Prince Georges County commissioners and board of education by a delegation of 100 members of the Oxon Hill P.-T. A. at Upper Marlboro yesterday.

Officials said the delegation was the largest ever to appear before either the commissioners or school board. The hearing had to be held in the auditorium of the Marlboro High School instead of at the courthouse in order to accommodate the crowd.

Armed with surveys and figures, spokesmen for the group told county officials they could purchase three tracts, totaling 19 acres, adjacent to the present school property for $13,000. They declared delay in acquiring the land would mean added cost to the county because of rapid development of the Oxon Hill area.

It was pointed out 720 pupils now have only three and a half acres of playground space. When the school was built in 1925, there were 282 pupils. The National Education Association's conception of an ideal playground, it was said, is one acre for every 45 pupils.

The speakers said the P.-T. A. would not ask for a new school "at present, although the need is rapidly arising."

Leaders of the group were Dr. Lenley T. Hopkins, association president; Arthur J. Lovell, Hartwell Tucker and Raymond J. Campbell.

Boykin Watson, president of the school board, and William A. Carson, chairman of the board of commissioners, promised to take the petition under consideration.

Trolley Freight Planned

Prince Georges County's joint committee on transportation will meet tomorrow night to decide what to do about the Maryland Public Service Commission's approval of the Capital Transit Co. petition to install "feeder" street cars on the Riverdale to Branchville line in nonrush hours.

The company's plan was vigorously opposed by the committee at a public hearing in Baltimore in September.

Members of the committee indicated they would not accept the service commission's ruling as final. They pointed out they could file an appeal to the circuit court or ask for an injunction from the Federal court.

The meeting will be held at the home of Capt. R. T. W. Duke, U. S. A., retired, on Edmonston road, at 8 p. m.

'Purge' Denied By Bureau Of Commerce

Young Announces Commodity Work Won't Be Abolished

Widely published reports that a prospective reorganization of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce would abolish 13 of the agency's district offices, leaving only 12 in Federal Reserve cities, were denied yesterday by Commerce officers, after a meeting called by the bureau's director, James W. Young, to dispel fears of a pending shake-up.

It was learned that Young told his division chiefs that there would be "no purges" in the bureau and that the several commodity divisions, compiling foreign trade information for American business, would not be abolished.

In a memorandum to bureau executives, Young also declared that although district offices in 12 key cities might be strengthened, those offices alone were not adequate to render the business aid with which the bureau was charged, and that there could not be wholesale closings of the rest of the bureau's 25 field establishment.

Young announced yesterday that a reorganization plan drafted by Carroll L. Wilson, special advisor to Commerce ecretary Hopkins, would be submitted to a committee of the bureau's "elder statesmen" for their recommendations before reorganization proposals were acted on.

Steward Tells How Giant Wave Swept Man to His Death

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—How Paul "Red" Johnson, a cabin steward on the American liner President Harding, was dashed overboard to his death by a wave so vast that it went over the ship's crow's nest, 80 feet above the deck, was described yesterday at a Federal inquiry by his fellow crew members.

Johnson died in a hurricane which struck the crowded liner last Tuesday as it made its way to New York with nearly 600 passengers fleeing the European war zones.

Raymond C. Henderson, a waiter, testified he was with Johnson just before the wave struck.

"There were three of us up there near the hospital looking at the storm," said Henderson. "He (Johnson) started to walk along the deck, and then the wave hit us, and I grabbed a stanchion and hung on. I shouted to the others to hang on to something and I saw (Rudolph) Fischer, the ship's interpreter, in the scuppers, hanging on to a lower stanchion. I didn't see Johnson again."

Police Break Up Threatened Riot Near High School

Police were called upon to put an end to a fight that threatened to embroil 200 Eastern High School students in a riot yesterday and led to emergency calls for a score of police.

David White, 16, of Lorton, Va., was slashed in the side with a knife, he told police, when he warned an armed youth "to put that gun away." He was treated at Providence Hospital.

The trouble started with the drenching of a group of Eastern students with a pail of water thrown from a window in the 1600 block of East Capitol street.

A 15-year-old colored youth was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and disorderly conduct, while his brother, 21, was charged with assaulting Policeman T. P. Denton, of the Ninth Precinct.

By Lucia Giddens

In the October twilight the aged figures creep almost as softly as shadows along the corridors of the building whic his home to them now. It is the time of day for memories—memories of years when twilight was a busy time, with children coming home and supper cooking.

When twilight comes to the Hebrew Home for the Aged, its inhabitants have finished the things which occupy them through the day. For a while each day they sit in the little chapel, gleaming with polished candelabra, while the murmur of the service flows around their meditations. The men play their checker games and the women have their needlework and knitting. In little groups the old people read their newspapers and talk, and so the day goes by.

But when twilight comes, they sit uietly, remembering.

Woman Lost Everything

The white-haired woman, over there, remembers the days before she "lost everything." Her two children died young in accidents. Her possessions were swept away in the depression. No relatives this side of Europe—and the exact whereabouts of those, unknown.

The gray-haired man, sitting alone in the shadowy corner, is newly solitary—in the midst of the friendly wrinkled faces nearby. Only by coming into the home were he and his wife able to be together, when they could no longer have a household of their own. But now she has gone to the hospital. So now he silently remembers those years when twilight meant that he would bustle around his little grocery store, getting ready to close it for the night and to go home.

He and his wife are one of the three couples at the Hebrew home. The rest of the 65 persons there came one at a time.

Some Go to Movies

One man rolls about in a wheel chair. Many of the others are spry enough to go for walks and to movies at a theater in the neighborhood on passes sent to the home.

Maurice Maser, superintendent of the home, pointed out some of the comforts which surround the aged group. Two day nurses and a night nurse watch over them. A dietitian plans their meals. The ladies' auxiliary of the home gives a birthday party each month, so they are sure to get a present even if every friend forgets the date. The oldest man has passed his ninety-second birthday, and the oldest woman is 90.

Moments of gayety come to the home—when comedies are shown with the movie apparatus which has been installed there; when a boys' band serenades with lively tunes. The old people have their own little jokes, too, which crop out in the conversation.

It will be a cheerful, comfortable scene which the vistors on the Community Chest "Go and See" tour will find between 2 and 4 p. m. today at the home, a Chest agency, at 1125 Spring road northwest.

But after the visitors have gone and the day's routine is over and it is not quite time for supper, the twilight will bring moments for remembering other days—before they were old and without a home of their own.

Farm Families To Get Flood, Drought Relief

3 Agencies to Provide Funds Until Regular Session in January

President Roosevelt said yesterday three Federal agencies would aid an estimated 115,000 farm families in drought and flood areas without seeking additional funds at the special session of Congress.

Officials of the agencies—the Disaster Loan Corporation, Farm Security Administration and Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation—reported they had sufficient funds to carry them on until the regular session of Congress in January.

These agencies will evtend loans and provide food to needy farmers under a program drawn up at a White House conference attended by a committee of Senators and Representatives from drought and flood-stricken areas.

Officials of the Farm Security Administration reported that the rural relief load had increased from about 400,000 families at the beginning of the current fiscal year to about 515,000 as a result of floods and droughts. The increase was spread over 29 States, extending from New England into the South and West into the Great Plains.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of the Congressional committee said the White House conference disclosed that the Disaster Loan Corporation had an unexpected and unobligated $20,000,000 in flood relief funds which could be used to aid families in the flood-affected areas of Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee and Kentucky.

The Farm Security Administration was said to have $9,000,000 available for loans and relief grants to farmers in drought States, while the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation was said to have $78,000,000 which could be used for food for humans.

The Agriculture Department has asked the railroads to reduce rates on feed shipments into drought areas.

Divorce-Seekers Serious, District Court Concludes

When marriage difficulties and patent disputes get to the lawsuit stage, the District Court has concluded, it takes a trial to settle them. The parties mean business.

So, the court announced yesterday, these cases will no longer be sent through the pretrial division, where Justice Laws, presiding, is able to simplify many legal questions and to settle some without a formal trial.

Program Canceled

The Federal Employes Playhouse program, announced for Thursday night in the Agriculture Department auditorium, has been canceled.

'40 Olympics to Be in Finland or Nowhere

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Sitting Bull was kicking up a fuss in the Dakotas and Gen. Miles and his Fort Yates garrison were sleeping on their muskets; the Sioux were hailing the Old Sitter as a prophet because he had promised them there would be no winter that year and the mild November weather was making him look terrific. The braves were in full war paint and for days had been stomping in a wild dance. The Indian Bureau in Washington was up nights.

POVICH

Little Egypt and her gyrations were about to blossom as the big belt of the Chicago World Fair, and in Washington police were alarmed at the depradations of bicycle thieves who were showing a partiality for wheels with the new-fangled coaster brakes. President Harrison was being quoted on the Wall Street panic and Capital sportsmen were subscribing funds which would permit Washington to be represented in the American Association baseball league.

That was November, 1890, and Georgetown and George Washington were playing their first football game. Technically, Georgetown wasn't playing George Washington. Georgetown was playing Columbian College, as G. W. U. was known 49 years ago before it took the name of the country's first President. But it was the start of the football rivalry that on Saturday at Griffith Stadium will be renewed for the eleventh time.

A Rough and Ready Football Era

Harvard, Yale and Princeton were the big-shots of college football. Princeton had just polished off the University of Virginia, 115 to 0. Navy was beginning to become something of a power. The week before Georgetown was to take the field against George Washington, the Hoyas had traveled to Annapolis and taken a 76-to-4 licking from the Midshipmen.

It was the rough and ready era of football. Nine years before, in '81, the college authorities had come to a decision about tie games. There would be no more ties. In case of a deadlock, the referee was instructed to order two additional 15-minute periods with an interval of five minutes between. Teams never surrendered the ball on downs. They could lose it only by fumbling or attempting a kick.

It wasn't until 1882 that the system of downs was introduced by the rules committee which was wearying of the haul-and-shove tactics. The new rule provided that "if, on three consecutive downs, a team shall not have advanced the ball 5 yards or lost 10 yards, they must give the ball to the other side at the spot of the last down."

That was the year, too, when numbered signals were originated. Until that season the signal callers barked his orders in wordy sentences, or used a code of letters. And it was finally decided that a team should consist of seven linemen, a quarterback, two halfbacks and a fullback. A field goal counted more than three touchdowns and a touchdown was equal to only two safeties.

How They Scored the Game in 1884

By 1884, the scoring system was again revised. A safety was to count one point, a touchdown two and a goal from field five. But that arrangement was found to be unsatisfactory later in the season and the touchdown was finally given its proper value. The touchdown was set at four points, the goal from field at two points and the safety at two points.

It was in 1884, too, that the flying wedge was first introduced. Both Princeton and Lehigh claimed to be originators of the famous "V" wedge. Until that season the game was officered by a referee and two judges, one selected by each team to argue claims of fouls and points, but without power of decision. The squawks by the judges were so loud that in 1884 judges were dispensed with and the referee alone officered the game. The office of umpire wasn't created until 1887.

In 1890 Yale set the style of shaggy heads on the football field and the long haried idea was immediately taken up by colleges the country over. Any player who couldn't show a young mattress on his scalp was always relegated to the rear row when the photographer called with his birdie and tripod to shoot the squad picture.

Yale Sowed Seed for Present Wing-Back

It was the same year when Yale introduced another innovation, the business of pulling the guard (Walter Heffiefinger) out of the line for end runs and at a little Y. M. C. A. School at Springfield, Mass., Coach Alonzo Stagg truly started something that has endured with great emphasis to this day.

At Springfield, Stagg, the old Yale star, conceived the idea of stationing the ends on offense 2½ yards behind the scrimmage line. He was sowing the seed of the wing-back principle now employed by virtually every college team. And it was Stagg, too, who at that time gave Notre Dame one of the fundamental ideas of the Notre Dame system—deploying the end on offense outside of the defensive tackle.

That was college football when George Washington and Georgetown took the field at the Hilltop for the game that was to be the fore-runner of the modern rivalry which will fetch 25,000 spectators to Griffith Stadium on Saturday. The musty records at George Washington show that G. W. U. lost that first game to Georgetown, 6 to 0.

But that isn't the entire story. What the G. W. U. records do not show is that Georgetown sent its second team on the field to win that game. The Georgetown first team was occupied that same afternoon taking a 20-0 beating from Swarthmore.

New York, Oct. 24.—Notes so hot:

The 1939 Tennesse football team is one of the greatest clubs in the history of the game, Jock Sutherland believes . . . "Watching them play Alabama made me glad I wasn't sitting on a football bench, at least Alabama's bench," the sober Scot says. "I believe. Tennessee could beat any current pro club . . . You seldom see a single Volunteer make a tackle; it's always three or four of them making the tackle. I don't think I've ever seen a club with so much poise, or a greater running back than Butler, or a greater defense. I've never seen a team so sensitive as to what that football means. They not only won't lose any games this year, but I doubt if they'll be scored on"—and that is the longest rave the dour dentist has ever uttered . . . His idea of a chat is "H'lo."

Finland Ten Million 'In the Red'

Finland, fighting for its existence, still hopes to hold the Olmpics—with neutral countries competing . . . The little government is $10,000,000 in the red on new stadiums, etc., but that isn't the red it's worrying about . . . Promoters along the winter golf circuit are clamoring for Sam Snead louder than they are for Byron Nelson, Henry Picard and the others who outdistanced Slamming Sambo this year . . . Steve Owen has given the Giants what must be the finest pass-defense plan ever devised . . . The Giants have intercepted 18 passes this season and only 29 have been completed againt them—though thrown by the best pitchers in the business . . . Get a load of Frank Wallace's piece on Pitt's hectic football situation—in the current sepost . . . Dequesne, conqueror of Pittsburgh, was lucky to beat Manhattan (which outgained the Dukes 20 first dones to 6).

The memory of the Yanks in the World Series is still too fresh in our mind to worry about which National League Club will get Medwick . . . What difference will it make next October? . . . Ruffing will strike out the bloke and DiMaggi'll hit liners over his head . . . One of the bulwarks of Clair Bee's eccentric Long Island U. football team refused to make the trip to the Bradley Tech game unless Bee paid the player's brother's expenses . . . Financially, as well as otherwise, Challedon and Kayak II are superbly matched . . . Challedon has won $174,535, Kayak II $161,025 . . . N. Y. U. has heard that Georgia has the roughest team in the country . . . After reading Albie Booth's denial of Larry Kelley's charge that the Ivy League exploits injured players, we've decided that this is the first tie of the year in the loop . . . And a pretty listless one if you ask me.

Pan-America Games Seen By Brundage

7 Cities Have Bids In for Substitute Events if European War Halts Program

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 24.—Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, said today the 1940 Olympic games will not be transferred from Helsingfors, Finland, and if conditions in Europe prevent their being held as scheduled they will not be held at all.

In the event no Olympic games are held next year, Brundage said, it is probable a set of Pan American games will be arranged to fill out the 1940 program. Cities which have expressed an interest in staging a substitute program are New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Havana, Cuba, and Buenos Aires.

"Once the Olympic games are awarded to a city by the international Olympic committee," Brundage said, "they cannot be taken away unless the agreement is violated by the city. The games cannot be held, however, in a country at war. The winter games, therefore, will not be held at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, unless hostilities cease."

Two Schools of Thought

Pointing out that the Finns have made a big investment in time and money preparing for the twelfth Olympiad games and will not release them if there is a slightest possibility of their being held in Finland, Brundage said: "Since the time is too short for proper organization, it may be definitely stated the games will not be transferred, and that if they cannot be held as scheduled, they will not be held at all.

There are two schools of thought on the idea of holding the games while there is a major war in progress, Brundage said. One is that it is somewhat "frivolous" to procede with an athletic program when a part of the world is at war;; the other is that "the Olympic flame should be kept burning, thus demonstrating there are still places where the youth of the world can meet on the peaceful fields of sport."

Amercians Mark Time

"Which will prevail depends on conditions at the time the games are to be held," Brundage continued. "The attitude of sports' organizations in various countries is being ascertained by the International Olympic Committee."

The American Alympic Committee, he said, is "marking time" until it is known definitely whether hte games will be held. If necessary, the committee will be able, on short notice, to select a United States team and raise sufficient funds. If there are no games in 1940, contributions will be used in 1944, Brundage said.

Cardinal Eleven Releases 3 Men

Chicago, Oct. 24 (AP).—Ernie Nevers, coach of the Chicago Cardinals, released three players today and recalled John Klumb, an end, from the Cincinnati BeBngals pro eleven.

The trio left out were Halfback Rock Reed, Fullback Ed Cherry and Center Lee Dugan. Nevers, still seeking a winning combination after his Cards dropped six of their first seven pro league games, also said the Cards' scheduled exhibition game Sunday with the BeBngals had been canceled to allow more time to prepare the Cards for their next league engagement.

Chicago's next league test is against Cleveland there November 5.

Cards Show Gain In Home Attendance

St. Louis, Oct. 24 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals, who finished second in the National League race, played before 411,000 customers at Sportsman's Park last season, a gain of 121,000 over 1938.

The Cardinals' farm teams also drew well, it was announced today, assuring the St. Louis organization of a profit. Whether or not any dividends will be declared for 1939 has not been disclosed.

What the G. U. Quarterback Sees . . . Frosh-Varsity Scrimmage

Colonial Squad Drilled Hard In Scrimmage

George Washington yesterday went through the heaviest work scheduled in preparation for Saturday's game with Georgetown. The varsity was split into two squads and engaged in a lengthy and fiercely contested scrimmage on the Polo Field.

At its completion Coach Bill Reinhart said he was satisfied with the condition of his squad, both mentally and physically.

A big mystery, as usual, is just who will be in George Washington's starting backfield. Murphy Booth, wing back; Sam Babich, short back, and Lud Urick, fullback, are pretty certain to be starters, but the identity of the tailback is completely in the dark.

In practice this week Reinhart has been alternating Billy Richardson with Ed Wiliamoski and Ken Batson. Batson and Richardson were very impressive running against The Citadel. Richardson is the best passer of the trio and Wiliamoski the best kicker.

Richardson, because he is a local boy and because he has been improving rapidly of late, is a good bet to begin the game at the left-half slot.

Hagerty Announces Tentative Georgetown Starting Line-up

While the student body and alumni were completing plans for a mammoth pep rally Friday night before the game, Coach Jack Hagerty announced Georgetown's tentative starting lineup for the George Washington game.

The first Georgetown eleven is practically the same as has been started in the team's last two games, with the exception of the ends. Bob Kercher and Francis (Reds) Daly, two of the Hoyas' best ends in years, who have been handicapped all season by injuries, are in shape and will be at the wings. For Daly the Colonial game will mark his first playing activity since the opener with Temple September 29.

Kercher played a good part of last weeks' game with Bucknell and showed flashes of the ability that earned him near unanimous All-District recognition last season. With Kerchner and Daly in the lineup, Georgetown can be expected to show a dangerous aerial attack for both are well over 6 feet and really can carry the ball after catching a pass.

The starting lineup announced by Hagerty: Ends, Kercher and Daly; tackles, Earl Fullilove and Joe Daniels; guards, Mark Ostinato and Augie iLo; center, Jim Reichey; quarterback, Joe McFadden; halfbacks, Jules Joshlap and Lou Ghecas, and fullback, Myron Damohray.

Escobar to Quit Bantamweights

ESCOBAR

"There is no money in the 118-pound class any more," Brix said. "The bantamweight division is dead as a mackerel."

The only other development along the fight front today was an offer by Promoter Mike Jacobs to Al Hostak, of Seattle, for a February 2 bout against Ceferino Garcia, of the Philippines in Madison Square Garden, to clear up the middleweight title.

Mickey Witek Named Most Valuable in I. L.

Newark Shortstop Picked First by 21 Of 23 Writers in Poll

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Oct. 24.—Mickey Witek, who hitch-hiked to a training camp in 1934, was named by the Sporting News today as the most valuable player in the International League for 1939.

Witek, 24-year-old shortstop for the Newark Bears, was picked first by 21 of 23 baseball writers participating in the poll.

He gained 119 points to top Estel Crabtree, Rochester outfielder, by 20 points, and John Dickshot, of the Jersey City Club, who was third, with 93 points.

Only Shortstops Picked

Witek and Lou Boudreau, who moved from Buffalo to finish the season with Cleveland, were the only shortstops in the field of 36 players nominated.

Rankings of the next seven were as follows: John Gee, Syracuse, pitcher, 71; Ollie Carnegie, Buffalo, outfielder, 55; Murray Howell, Baltimore, outfielder, 43; Glen Stewart, Jersey City, utility, 41; Boudreau, 37; Si Johnson, Rochester, pitcher, 31; Harry Davis, Rochester, first baseman, 27.

Carnegie, who placed fifth, was named the most valuable player in the loop last season.

Was Second Sacker

Witek originally played second base before being shifted to short by the Bears and is expected to return to the keystone sack when he gets a trial with the New oYrk Giants next spring.

Breaking into organized ball with the Bassett, Va., club of the Bi-State League after thumbing his wa yto a Beckley, W. Va., training camp, Witek moved up to Norfolk in 1936 and Newark in 1938.

With the exception of the 1938 season, when he slipped to .296, he has hit well over .300. He ranked seventh among the batters of the International the past season, with a percentage of .330.

Bob Peebles' 80 Wins HOLC Golf

Bob Peebles won low gross in the annual HOLC tournament yesterday at Indian Spring with an 80.

The winning foursome was composed of Byron Beall, Don McKiethen, B. Hoeck and M. Magness, with a gross total of 390 for the 18-hole event.

Bob Feller Third; DiMaggio Receives 280 Out of 336 Possible Points

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 24.—Joe Di Maggio, whose big bat earned him the circuit's batting championship and helped propel the New York Yankees to a fourth straight world title, today was voted the most valuable player in the American League during the 1939 season.

The 24-year-old Yankee centerfielder, who thus wins a trophy from the sporting news, received a total of 280 out of a possible 336 points in balloting by a committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Di Maggio, who hit .381 to win the American League batting title, was given 15 first place votes of 14 points each, with three writers of the 24-member committee placing him second, three third, one fourth and two fifth. Choices for second place through tenth were rated from nine points each down to one point.

His First Season

The naming of Di Maggio as the circuit's most valuable player caps the finest season the brilliant Italian-American star has enjoyed since he came up with the Yanks in 1936. In that year he hit .323 and followed with averages of .346 and .324, respectively, in 1937 and 1938. This past season he hammered out 30 homers and drove in 126 runs.

Jimmy Foxx, Boston first baseman who won the valuable player award for the third time last year, captured second place in the 1939 balloting. He received a total of 170 points, a testimonial to a fine season in which illness kept him out of action for a long period. Although he received only on efirst place ballot, two scribes placed him second and 11 made him their third place choice. Only one writer failed to place the Boston star.

Bob Feller, cleveland's young pitching star who won 24 games, was third with 155 points. Fourth place went to Ted Williams, the Boston freshman outfielder, who led the league in runs batted in, driving home 142. Williams received 126 points although he did not get any first place votes, as Feller drew threee.

Charley Ruffing, Yank pitcher who won 21 games, also failed to get first place mention, but piled up 116 points for fifth place, six points ahead of Bill Dickey, the Yankee's star catcher, who was first choice of three committeemen but was unplaced by 11 others. The other two to receive first place consideration were Pitcher Emil (Dutch) Leonard, of Washington, who won 20 games for a sixth place team, and Mike Kreevich, Chicago outfielder. Leonard compiled 71 points, Kreevich 38. Ranking ahead of Kreevich, however, were Bob Johnson, Philadelphia outfielder, with 52 points, and Joe Gordon, New York second baseman, with 43.

Other players receiving points included: Pitcher Clint Brown, Chicago, 34; Third Baseman Ken Keltner, Cleveland, 26; First Baseman George McQuinn, St. Louis, 24; Second Baseman Charles Gehringer, Detroit, 21; Pitcher Bob Grove, Boston, 17; Shortstop Joe Cronin, Boston, 15; Pitcher Ted Lyons, Chicago, 13; First Baseman Henry Greenberg, Detroit, 12, and Pitcher "Buck" Newsom, Detroit, 11.

McQuinn On "Honor Roll"

The "Honor Roll," a tabulation of votes for players who had excellent seasons but were not well up in the running for the valuable player award, was topped by the Browns' star, McQuinn, and Pitcher Tommy Bridges, of Detroit, each being named 11 times. Cronin and Grove of Boston, Keltner of Cleveland and Gordon of New York came next, each with nine votes.

The writers on the selection committee: John Malaney, Gerry Moore and Victor Stout, of Boston; James Gallagher, Ed Burns and Howard Roberts, Chicago; Gordon Cobbledick, Ed McAuley, Frank Gibbons, Cleveland; H. G. Rennie, Ed Murphy, New York; James Isaminger, Al Horwits, Frank Yeutter, Philadelphia; Glen Wallar, James Gould, Ray Gillespie, St. Louis, and Shirley Povich, Burton Hawkins and Frank O'Neill, of Washington.

Mrs. Davy Ties Mrs. Meckley in Women's Golf Field Day

84's Capture Final Event On D. C. Card

Mrs. Charlotte Stern Wins Net Honors With 80; 111 in Play Over Two Courses

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. Betty Meckley and Mrs. Myron Davy, Indian Spring and Congressional Club champions, respectively, tied for low gross among the first team players as the annual Field Day for the Women's District Golf Association teams concluded the season yesterday at Indian Spring and Manor. Low gross among the second and third team players at Manor went to Mrs. Harry J. Cooper, of the host club, with 92.

Net honors among the first team players went to Mrs. Charlotte Stern, also of Indian Spring, who played her home course in 43, 42—85, and deducted a five handicap for a net 80. Mrs. O. M. Reed, of Washington, won low net in the second and third team play with 104, 26—78. Mrs. Reed was the third flight winner in the recent Mid-Atlantic tourney.

Final Nine Disastrous

Mrs. Meckley was apparently off on one of her course record sprees as she played the first nine in 37, two over men's par, but although she hit her shots well on the return trip she was in constant trouble around the greens and mixed with a few putting lapses she required 47 strokes on the back nine for the 84. Mrs. Davy was more consistent with a 43 on the front nine and 41 coming in for an 84 aided by a deuce on the seventeenth. Mrs. Stern and Marion Brown each missed a tie by a stroke, with 85's. The leaders will play off the tie.

At a luncheon at Manor following the play, Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the District Women's Golf Association, officially presented the team trophies won in the spring, as well as yesterday's awards. The first team cup went to Chevy Chase, the second to Congressional and the third to Manor, with the individual players receiving pins.

Tied at 81

Four tied for second with net 81's in the first team play, and were drawn out in the following order: Susan Backer, Chevy Chase, 94—13—81; Mrs. J. W. Beller, Chevy Chase, 91—10—81; Louise Claytor, also of the championship team at Chevy Chase, 86—5—81, nad Mrs. H. W. Sharpe, golf committee chairman at Indian Springs, 92—11—81.

The remainder of the awards went to players deadlocked at 82, and were drawn: Mrs. L. O. Cameron, Chevy Chase, 93—11—82; Mrs. R. C. Newell, Argyle, 102—21—82; Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, 87—5—82; Mrs. A. T. Minnix, Columbia, 87—15—82, and Mrs. Norman Frost, Columbia, 95—13—82.

In the second and third team play, Mrs. R. H. Salovan, Indian Spring, missed a tie by a stroke with 106—97—79, while Mrs. Max Taylor, Manor, a consistent winner of late, had 97—17—80. Three were tied at 81 net, Mrs. W. B. Vogel, Indian Spring, 101—20—81; Mrs. F. R. Keefer, Chevy Chase, 100—91—81, and Mrs. Arnold McNitt, a member of Congressional's winning team, with 94—13—81.

Mrs. Pugh Draws 3d

Mrs. Gale E. Pugh, association vice president from the host club, was drawn first among the 82 scorers, posting 95—13—82, while others included Mrs. W. F. Kerr, Beaver Dam, 106—24—82; Mrs. L. F. Hurley, Columbia, 106—24—82, and Mrs. Mack Myers, Manor, 97—15—82.

Other winners on the ample prize list for the second and third team players were, in order: Mrs. John Lever, Indian Spring, 103—20—83; Mrs. R. F. Nicholson, Washington, 105—22—83; Mrs. R. T. Schlosberg, Army and Navy, 99—16—83; Mrs. C. C. Penn, Congressional, 101—17—84; Mrs. Dan Moorman, Congressional, 104—24—84; Mrs. Earl Clary, Indian Spring, 105—19—86; Mrs. J. W. Cramer, Manor, 101—15—86; Mrs. L. C. Haugen, Army and Navy, 106—24—86, and Sally Whipper, Washington, 103—17—86.

Lineup Is Shifted For BaBltimore Clash

Mrs. J. F. Dodall announced two changes in the intercity team that will conclude it's schedule in Baltimore today, with Mrs. R. L. Rose, Congressional, and Mrs. H. J. Cooper, Manor, replacing Mrs. L. B. Platt, Chevy Chase, and Mrs. H. J. Simons, Manor.

Mrs. Rose was the main point scorer in the match with Philadelphia last week. The local linkeswomen swamped the Baltimoreans in an early season match at Manor, and will be favored today at Hillendale.

Mrs. J. S. Phillips, of Army and Navy, is accepting entries until 1 p. m. today for the N. B. C. tourney Friday at the service club. Players are requested to bring their own caddies.

Columbia Next Favored Foe of V.M.I. Gridders

Squadron to Withhold Two Vets From Starting Line-up Saturday

Lexington, Va., Oct. 24.—Virginia Military Institute's Fighting Squaddon—a nickname richly deserved this season in the light of successive upsets of two favored teams, Vanderbilt and Virginia—will go on another giant-killing expedtion this week. To be strictly accurate, it wil be a big game hunt, with Columbia's Lions the target for V. M. I.'s gridiron weapons.

Capt. Paul Shu and his flashy Sophomore backfield mates, Abisha "Bosh" Pritchard and Nelson Catlett, have proved twice in the last two weeks that they are not satisfied with 13-13 ties. In the Vanderbilt game, an 81-yard run by Pritchard, the Hopewell speedster, clinched the decision for Coach "Pooley" Hubert's deteermined battlers.

Last week, after Virginia's Cavaliers had matched the touchdowns scored by Shu and Pritchard, Catlett and Pritchard collaborated on a neatly executed lateral pass to get in position for Catlett's winning placement from the 16-yard line.

Coach Hubert may modify his plan of keeping one ace in the hole by keeping a pair of aces under cover when the opening whistle sounds on Baker Field. Capt. Shu, James "Son" Shelby, and Roy Replogle are slated as the veteran starters in the backfield, with a steadily improving blocker, Sophomore Jimmy Matthews as the fourth member of the quartet.

Pritchard and Catlett will be held out for climax roles, with Paul Shu taking care of the punting assignment while they are unavailable. Incidentally, the versatile Sophomore pair together averaged nearly 47 yards with their punts against Virginia, even though Pritchard deliberately shortened his distance when aiming for the coffin corner. Catlett's personal average, including his first boot of 75 yeards from the scrimmage line, was 53 yards.

'Optimistic' Boyd Sees Score for Riders

MaybeThey'llRegister Against Tech Friday, Opines Coach ofWeek

By Bill Burnett

This week's award for "Most Optimistic Coach" goes to Artie Boyd, newly installed head of football activities at Roosevelt High.

Boyd, in defiance of his teams record thus far—it has yet to score a point in four losses, setting the opposition up to 84 points—guarantees the Riders wil lwin two interhigh games this year. And he somehow sees signs of Roosevelt getting a score pretty soon, probably against Tech in Friday's feature scholastic clash.

"We're just beginning to roll," the affable mentor opines. "When we do, you'll see an awful lot of chips fly! Our trouble so far has been that we don't know what to do with the ball when we get it. And instead of kicking to get rid of the ball, we usually let the opposition intercept a pass. Unless I learned wrong, that's not quite the right procedure. My two quarterbacks, Billy Hall and Erwin Breier, will catch on soon and then things'll be different."

Boyd Started It

The odd part of Roosevelt's "pointless" record is that Boyd is directly responsible for having started it. In their final interhigh outing last year the Riders faced Eastern on a Rider gridiron 6 inches deep in mud. Eastern slushed off with a 6-to-0 decision, and the victorious coach was the same Artie Boyd.

Against Tech Friday the Riders again will be the short end of the odds, mally due to their comparative showing in games with St. Jonn's. In the first game of the season the Johnnies smashed Roosevelt, 14 to 0, and since then Tech has come out of its slump enough to earn a -6to-0 decision over the Scarlet Cadets.

The other end of the interhigh double bill will be filled by Western and Wilson, meeting on the new Wilson field. All indications point to Western's Red Raiders as the only conceivable team with a chance to trim Hardy Pearceõs interhigh champions of Central, so the game should be a breather for Western. Coach Carl Heintel, of Wilson, is the first to admit his chances are about as great as the proverbial snowball's.

Central Plays at Night

An interesting night encounter, the second of the season for Central, will be staged at Alexandria, where Coach Al Doran's G. W. High eleven faces the locals. So anxious is Doran to whip the Pearceman that he rested his first team last week in a game with

ARTIE BOYD

Maury High so it would be ready for Central. It'll be a good game, wit hprobably 3,000 or 4,000 rabid followers of the two teams in the stands.

At least two high school clubs will leave town for Friday games, Eastern traveling to Richmond for a meeting with John Marshall High and St. John's squaring off with Calvert Hall. The prize prep tiff will find Georgetown Prep, surprise winner of a pair of games already, in opposition to Landon, one of its bitterest rivals. The day's hostilities are closed out with the clash of Washington-Lee and Anacostia. On Saturday Bullis, Devitt and St. Alban's keep the grid fires burning with engagements with St. Benedict's, at Newark, N. J.; Portsmouth High, at Portsmouth, Va., and Church Farm School, respectively.

Merchants Drill

The Southeast Merchants will drill tonight at 8:30 p. m. at Third street and North Carolina avenue southeast, to prepare for their game this Sunday with the Arlington Fire Department No. 1. All players are urged to be present to measure for new uniforms.

V. P. I. Stresses Offensive for W. and L. Game

Special Dispatch to The Post

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 24.—For 44 years the Washington and Lee goal line has been one of the main objectives of Virginia Tech football teams—and this year is no exception. The Tech eleven, which showed power in walloping Centre Vollege, 28 to 0, in the Homecoming game here, is again stressing attack this week as it prepares to help dedicate Lynchburg's splendid new stadium Saturday.

The cadet regiment, now composed of five battalions, together with Tech's cadet band of 120 pieces, will be on hand to help make the day one of the biggest in the annals of Virginia football.

A new bidder for all-star honors is coming to the front these days on the Tech gridiron, and the coaches are mapping their attack this week with his slashing power in mind. He is George (Buckeye) Warriner, 188-pound fullback. He is a junior from Richmond who prepped at Farmville High School.

In the past two weeks, in the games with William and Mary and Centre, Warriner has carried the ball 35 times for an average gain of 5.7 yards per try. This constitutes creditable line-ripping in any league. He also has shared the kicking and passing and is improving steadily in these departments. Besides scoring one touchdown in the Centre game he fired a bull's-eye pass to Herb Thomas for another score. Young Mr. Warriner is sure to be a marked man by the W. and L. defense.

No 'Gate' Problem Maryland's Worry

Georgetown-George Washington Game Saturday Expected to Draw Most of Fans and Leave Maryland-Florida 'Holding Bag'

While the University of Maryland football squad drills earnestly for Saturday's homecoming game with the University of Florida, which promises to be a rig-snorting, crowd-pleasing battle, Terrapin officials are burning the midnight oil wondering if there'll be any crowd to enjoy it.

A couple of colleges in nearby D. C.—Georgetown and George Washington—are also playing on Saturday. And since, barring a hurricane or some other extraordinary happening, they figure to draw upward of 25,000, there won't be many stray fans left for Maryland.

It's a pity, for Florida will bring a pretty fair football team here, one that should be an even choice to jolt the Terps, who have dropped their last two starts to Virginia and Rutgers after opening up with a pair of convincing victories over Hampden-Sydney and Western Maryland.

The Gators, almost predominantly a sophomore squad, have been improving rapidly of late, as their recent 7-0 upset of Boston College will attest. It was B. C.'s first defeat of a season which includes a 19-0 conquest of Temple, which previously had beaten Texas Christian.

The Terrapin squad presents a stiff psychological problem even for Prof. Frank Dobson, who dotes on such things. It is not easy to work your boys up to another tough game after they have suffered physically and mentally the previous two weeks while losing games they easily could have won, "breaks" having been even. Maryland played Virginia on almost even terms, but lost to a fourth-period Cavalier rally. Then against Rutgers last week they rolled up twice as many first downs, had a decisive advantage in yards gained both on the ground and passing, but still dropped a 25-13 decision.

'Gator Soph Scores On 109-Yard Dash

Gainesville, Fla., Oct. 24 (AP).—One of the best scrimmages of the season was turned in by the Florida football squad today as players worked for the opportunity to make the trip to the Maryland game at College Park Saturday.

A 109-yard touchdown run by Andy Beno, stocky sophomore fullback, was the high spot of the afternoon. He intercepted a pass deep in the end zone and was aided along the route by good blocking.

Others showing to advantage were Bud Walton and Russ Yonder, back, and Frank Smoak and Carl Mitchell, ends.

The team will leave for College Park late Thursday afternoon, accompanied by the band, the cheer leaders and the pep club.

Warmer Weather Ahead

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—Directors of Servel, Inc., makers of gas refrigerators, today voted to call for redemption and retire on December 30 this year the 6,932 outstanding shares of 7 per cent preferred stock. The redemption price will be $110 a share plus accrued unpaid dividends.

Payment of a dividend of 25 cents a share on common stock was ordered by the directors, payable December 1 to holders of record November 16. Three dividends of the same amount were paid earlier in the year, together with a special of 25 cents in November.

Screwy News From Football Fronts

One Coach Lets Rival Score First to Save Much Humiliation

By Bill Boni

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Oct. 24.—College football, in the main, is pretty grim and serious big busines, but just to prove it hasn't lost its sense of humor, here's 1939's first issue of the gridiron' Screwy News:

It was a very hot day, and Forest Evashevski, Michigan's quarterback, was "dogging it" in practice.

"Come on Eevie; let's get going," said Coach Fritz Crisler.

"Ah, it's too hard to work, coach," was the reply.

"Just think of those poor guys now at ———," said Crisler, naming a Southern school. "They've been practing for a month."

"Sure," said Evashevski, "but they get paid for it."

A Texas high school coach was asked what sort of season he'd been having.

"Not bad," he replied, "though w lost one game we should have won Our boys marched down and scored a touchdown. On the extra point try our quarterback called for a pass. The other team intercepted, ran the ball back the length of the field, and kicked the extra point to beat us, 7 to 6.

"And now they tell me that's against the rules."

One of the South's veteran coaches claims he has a new system.

"We used to get licked 28-0," he explains. "Now we let the other team score first easily. That means they kick to protect their lead, and we only get licked 7-0."

Bill Crowley, the noted official, tells this one on Columbia's Lou Little. Before one of the Columbia games, Little visited the officials' dressing room and urged them to be on the lookout for defensive holding.

"There's been a lot of that lately," said Lou, "and I want it stopped."

As umpire, it was Crowley's job to watch for any such infractions. The game started and, about 10 minutes later, the two teams were right in front of the Columbia bench. A play was called and Crowley, peering at it, detected defensive holding.

He called the penalty—on Columbia—then turned and bowed to Lou Little.

Jim Crowley gets the palm for classic description of an upset. The Fordham coach, who scouted Pittsburgh in its 21-13 defeat by Duquesne last week, gives the following version of the Dukes' last touchdown:

"Duquesne was leading, 14-13, and decided to hold on to the ball. They held on to it so desperately that, first thing you know, they were making first downs and, suddenly, they'd scored."

Classic Description Of Upset Gets Bill Award of the Palm

St. Martin's College, near Tacoma, Wash., has a center who's a one-man show. His name is "Tiny" Schumann, and he weighs 262 pounds. So fat is Tiny that, even if he could bend over far enough to look at his backs when he snaps the ball, he wouldn't be able to see them because of his stomach. But Tiny has a fine sense of timing. So he just looks straight ahead, and passes the ball by instinct. They say the backs are in the wrong place far more often than Tiny's passes.

To add to the picture Tiny always comes bouncing out of the huddle with his "corporation," which would do credit to an alderman, leading the way. In a high falsetto voice, he hollers at the opposition:

"Oh, boy, look out for this one! It's a dilly."

You can hear him in the stands.

The acme of secret maneuvers must be this: Benny Friedman, the old Michigander who coaches City College of New York, sent a scout to watch Lowell Textile play St. Anselm's last Saturday. When he got there he found he was a day late. Without any warning the game had been switched to Friday night.

Redskins' Pass Defense Haunts Coach as Packer Game Nears

Green Bay's Aerial Raids Are Feared

Air Defense Has Been Glaring Weakness of Flaherty's Club Since Opening of Campaign

Special Dispatch to The Post

Milwaukee, Oct. 24.—The fear that the Redskins' finest weapon—the forward pass — may be turned against them on Sunday haunts Coach Ray Flaherty this week as he grooms his athletes for the battle with Green Bay's Packers.

Offensively, his Redskins have been the standout team in the league with the forward pass. Their 57 per cent efficiency in the first five games of the season is unmatched by any other professional club. But the other side of the picture—the pass defense—is the obvious reason for Coach Flaherty's misgivings.

Davey O'Brien's passes in the Redskins' opening game kept the Redskins back on their heels all afternoon. Ace Parker's passes for the Dodgers led directly to the two touchdowns against the Redskins in that game. The Pirates scored one of their two touchdowns in Griffith Stadium on a pass, and at Pittsburgh last week the Pirates twice scored through the air and were on their way to a third aerial goal when the timer's gun sounded.

Packer Passes Rout Lions

The Redskins' pass defense has been akin to high-schoolish, Flaherty has told his squad, and the team's work this week will emphasize the defense against aerial raids.

While the Redskins were appearing very shoddy indeed against the Pirates' aerial attack last week, the Packers at Green Bay were laying waste to the Detroit Lions by air raids.

In Arnold Herber and Cecil Isbell the Packers boast two of the most feared passers in the business and they will be aiming at Don Hutson, the end who is acknowledged to be the best receiver in the entire pro league. Hutson twice scored on passes from Isbell and Herber last week against the Lyons despite the fact that Gus Henderson, Lion coach, is a supposed specialist on pass defense.

Hutson Clever Runner

And the third Green Bay touchdown against the Lions also evolved from a pass, Minnesota's Andy Uram taking a heave from Isbell for the score. When Green Bay succeeds in getting a pass into Hutson's hands, moreover, they have no mere end running goalward. Hutson is rated high among the league's broken field runners.

The Redskins will be at their physical peak against the Packers. None were seriously injured against the Pirates last Sunday and Flaherty will not scrimmage the team in practice in an effort to preserve their physical condition.

Sandlotters Want Games

Arlington Fire Department No. 1 team, winner over D. C. Reformatory in its last start, 34 to 0, wants Sunday games with unlimited elevens. OXford 3200 is the phone number.

Manager Bill Hickey can be reached at LIncoln 2348-W to arrange 125-pound games with the Green Hornets. Saturday and Sunday dates are preferred.

The Roman Crashers, 145-pound gridders, are booking games at COlumbia 0507-J.

Murray Realtors need several Sunday dates with 170-pound clubs having gridirons. Manager Tony Neri's phone number is ADams 2901.

Hessick Coal Co.'s 125-pounders are looking for a Sunday foe. Challengers should call NOrth 5625-J.

H. J. Stegeman, Georgia's 'Grand Old Man,' Buried

Athens, Ga., Oct. 24 (AP).—They buried "Stege" today in Oconee Hill Cemetery.

It was a sad farewell to Herman Jerome Stegeman, a great figure in Southern sports, and "Grand Old Man" of University of Georgia athletics.

Brief funeral services in the chapel on Georgia's campus preceded interment.

Pallbearers were friends and associates in sports for more than two decades, including Rex Enright, Vernon Smith and Ted Twomey, of the University of South Carolina, all former Georgia assistants.

Traditions Stegeman helped form at Georgia since 1919 will remain after him. Stegeman coached four sports at Georgia—football, basketball, baseball and track. He served as athletic director, dean of men and head of the phyiscal education department.

Stgeeman, just 48, a native of Holland, Mich., and once a great athlete at the University of Chicago, died Sunday. He never had recovered from a heart attack suffered a year ago during the Georgia Tech-Florida football game.

Beaten by scores of 61-0 and 85-0 this year, the University of Chicago football eleven still has its high-scoring heroes—Halfback John Davenport (left) and End Bob Wasem (right), each of whom scored 6 points. 'Ace' Gutowsky Passes Battles' Yardage Mark

Total of 3,399 Yards In 8 Pro Seasons Sets Record; Filchock Shines

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 24.—Records continue to fall in the National Football League, the latest honor going to LeRoy (Ace) Gutowsky, Brooklyn Dodgers' veteran fullback.

When Ace picked up 7 yards against the Phillies last Sunday he boosted his total number of yards gained in eight seasons of pro football to 3,399, one more than the old mark of Cliff Battles, individual statistics released today revealed.

Another individual record was tied when Ralph Kercheval, of Brooklyn, and Ward Cuff, of New York, kicked three field goals each against the Phillies and Bears, respectively. Cuff's performance brought his total for the season to five, equaling the number he and Kercheval kicked to tie for the league championship last year.

Joe Maniaic, of the Bears, increased his total as the ground-gaining pacemaker to 481 yards and overtook Bill Smith, of the Cardinals, for second place in scoring, 37 to 34. John Drake, of Cleveland, held the lead in scoring by counting one touchdown, to bring his total to 42. The latter needs only two more touchdowns to tie Don Hutson's mark of nine in one season, made with Green Bay.

Parker Hall, former Mississippi All-America with Cleveland, continued to show the way in passing with 56 completions for 702 yards, but Frank Filchock, of Washington, had the best percentage with 24 out of 37. Arnie Herber, Green Bay; Bernie Masterson, Bears, and Filchock each have thrown five touchdown passes.

Perry Schwartz, Brooklyn, broke a three-way tie with Vic Spadaccini, Cleveland, and Bill Smith, Cardinals, in pass receiving, with a total of 19 to his credit.

3 Eight-Rounders Slated for Arena

Still struggling to put the gasping boxing business back on its feet in the District, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday announced three eight-round battles will headline the card Monday night at Turner's arena, with Ublo Dano, Filipino featherweight, and Joey Spangler, Richmond welter, already signed up for the show.

Spangler probably will be rematched with Phil Furr, one-time outstanding District welter, who took a questionable decision over the rugged Virginian here recently. Ahearn is seeking to get Armanda Sicilia, Al Mancini, Baby Yack or Harry Jeffra as an opponent for Dano.

Hostak-Garcia Titlel Bout Sought

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—Mike Jacobs, head of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, today offered Al Hostak, of Seattle, 30 per cent of the receipts to defend his National Boxing Association middleweight championship against Ceferino Garcia, of Los Angeles, in Madison Square Garden, February 22. Garcia is recognized as champion in New York and California.

Jacobs' offer was wired to Eddie Marino, Hostak's manager. If the bout is made Garcia will receive a similar percentage.

Portable Radios Frowned on at Northwestern

Chicago, Oct. 24 (AP).—Portable radio sets were anned today from games at Northwestern University.

Spectators lugged al sore of funny looking boxes into the stands at the Wisconsin-Northwestern game Saturday, and listened to blaring descriptions of races at horse tracks and accounts of other football games much to the anoyance of nearby fans.

Ted Peyser, ticket manager, received so many squawks that he decided portable sets henceforth must be left at home.

Headache to Be Tossed Into Laps Of Pacific Coast Conference Officials

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Oct. 24.—Trying to pick a football team for the New Year's Day Rose Bowl game now is balmy business, like betting on a dead horse, but the people's choice today it appears, is the University of Southern California.

Picking the Trojans is touchy stuff. Supporters of Oregan State College and University of Oregon believe their team shave just as good a chance, and the niversity of California at Los Angeles delegation has assumed a "show me' 'attitude. O. S. C. is the only undefeated, untied member. The others have one tie.

The big scramble may not be decided until Southern California and U. C. L. A. meet December 9. It may end up in a two or three-way deadlock. This headache will be tossed into the laps of faculty athletic representatives of the Pacific Coast Conference.

Southern California seems like the best bet because of its tremendous power on the ground, a nifty passing attack and an endless stream of reserve material.

Trojans Improve

The Trojan team has shown consistent improvement since the opening 7-7 tie with Oregon. It swamped Washington State, 27-0, and Illinois, 26-0.

In contrast, its three rivals, after peak attainments, have displayed in and out tendencies not consistent with real championship form.

Oregon was defeated by Gonzaga last wek. The wek before, Oregón State barely nosed out University of Portland, while U. C. L. A. could do nothing better than tie with Stanford.

In his fifteenth season a Stouthern California, Coach Howard Jones has come up with a bunch of players he believes surpasses any others in the matter of sheer squad power.

Three for Each Spot

He counts 'em thre to six deep in all positions. Actually the squad is overbalanced at the quarterback and fullback positions, with three first string men at each spot and two others to fall back on.

The Trojans have to hurdle California, Oregon State, Stanford, Washington and U. C. L. A., before New Year's Day game talk. Notre Dame is sandwiched in between. It is a man-sized job, but the man who givse you a ticket for your money will bet you even it will be accomplished.

If the other half of the Rose Bowl bout could be named now, it probably would be Tennessee. Onel U. S. C. official said today Tennessee would be his choice.

Chicago Grid Plan Is 'Joke,' Students Say

University Publication Claims American Fans Are Laughing at Idea

Chicago, Oct. 24.—The University of Chicago student daily, taking editorial cognizance of the two worst defeats ever suffered by the university football team, asserted today that "we are getting to be a big joke in the eyes o fthe American public."

The Editorial was inspired by the 61-0 defeat suffered by Chicago at the hands of Harvard a week ago and the 85-0 defeat inflicted by Michigan Saturday.

"While American social convention expects universities to provide good football shows," the Daily Maroon said, "our school has become a benevolent institution furnishing material on which newspaper writers from all over the country may practice cleaverness when they have nothing better to fill space.

"The result is that we are getting to be a big joke in the eyes of the American public and a sore spot to our alumni . . . for the football team, however, the matter isn't such a big joke . . . for hteir reward the players get derision. This might be good moral training for martyrs but football players are human beings, too."

Charlotte Hall Faces Saints In Annual Tiff

Upset Last Year, Hallmen Wary of Friday Schoolboy Foe

Special Cable to The Post

Charlotte Hall, Md., Oct. 24.—The bitterest rivalry in all of southern Maryland comes to its annual head here on Friday afternoon when the Charlotte Hall Military Academy football team does battle with its sectional rival, St. Mary's Academy, of Leonardtown.

Not a big game in the eyes of the Maryland scholastic football world, Friday's battle, nevertheless, probably will be fought harder than any game on the Cadets' schedule this season.

Last year, the Charlotte Hall eleven was the heavy favorite to win, only to have the Saints upset the dope with a 13-7 victory in a sizzling game. The Cadets, overconfident, were unable to score until the final minute of play.

The 1938 beating still stings, and Coach Shel Ehringer is determined that such an upset will not occur this year. To this end, he warned the squad today against becoming over-confident because of its good showing against Georgetown Prep at Garrett Park on Saturday.

The report of the team physician to Ehringer last night definitely gave word to the effect that Ernie Bowersox, John Smith, Sam Burch, Walt Nechey and Elliot Dent will be unable to see action against St. Mary's because of injuries sustained in the Georgetown fray.

The Cadet coach will be unable to scrimmage his charges this week because of the fact that he has only four able-bodied backs fit for active duty. Drills this week will be devoted to dummy scrimmage.

Hoya, Colonial Stars Go on Air

Billy Richardson, George Washington's crack little halfback, and Francis Daly, Georgetown's star end, will be interviewed over WMAL at 6 o'clock this evening. Richardson and Daly were high school rivals while playing at Central and Tech, respectively.

At 7:40 Friday evening coaches Jack Hagerty of Georgetown, and Bill Reinhart, of George Washington, will be interviewed by Gordon Hittenmark on his sidewalk program in front of the Capitol Theater.

Four Injured Halfbacks Put Navy Coach on 'Spot'

Annapolis, Oct. 24.—A series of blows all striking at one spot, the left halfback position, has put Maj. Larson, Navy head coach, in a tight place, the football mentor admitted this afternoon.

With Emmett Wood incapacitated until near the end of the season, Lou Mayo, who started in his place against the Irish, was added to the unusable list this afternoon, while Cliff Lenz, the heavyweight of the backfield group, who was relied upon to pinch hit, limped badly this afternoon from an injury in practice yesterday afternoon, and was able to take only a small part in the practice.

As Sherwood Werner is still on the hospital list, the first four players in the same backfield position are either definitely out of Saturday's game with Clemson or there is grave doubt as to their ability to play.

At this juncture, Larson is considering John Gutting and Phil Boothe, sophomores who have never played in a varsity match, for this backfield spot, or using both Wesley Gebert and Bob eLonard, also sophomores, in the starting backfield.

Mayo was on the field this afternoon and took part in all the practice except contact work. He also feels quite well, but he received a hard blow on the head Saturday, and the medical officer thinks that he had better rest from hard work through this week.

Transmitter Defeats Royal Business by Nose at Laurel

White Sand Runs Third, A Neck Back

3 Horses Charge to Wire in Thrilling Run For Money; Winner Pays Followers $9.80

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 24.—Running like a horse of iron, Transmitter, racing in the green, white and blue of Mrs. J. H. McCoole, turned back a series of challenges and then lasted to defeat Royal Business, an old half-mile friend running for the first time in the silks of O. S. Jennings, by a nose. This action was in the fifth race, the outstanding event of a Tuesday card that did not have a feature race.

There was a third member of this thrilling finish. Mac Thorn Farm's White Sand was a third, a neck off the two in front of her. Others who made bold bids and weakened were Bain Marie, Balloter, Scrooge and Brown Knight, although it is stretching a point to include Brown Knight, a dull-runner in the final analysis, after winning his previous race.

Transmitter paid a $9.08 mutuel and scampered around the mile and a sixteenth course in 1:46 2-5. The oval was lightning fast. The action was witnessed by a crowd of 8,000. The weather, as has been the case throughout the meeting with the exception of one day, was perfect for the sport.

Under the riding of Apprentice Charlie Friedman, Transmitter was forced to take a whipping ride to get to the top in the first furlong. This was enough to take the starch out of a less courageous horse. However, Transmitter did what was asked and took command. Scrooge, a horse which has been going in good form, went up to vie with Transmitter for the lead, but the son of Sickle ran him into the ground and he dropped back.

As if he had not already had plenty of opposition, Balloter came around horses and he went up to test the mettle of Transmitter. The front-runner turned back this challenge, too, but only after a struggle that lasted to the head of the stretch. At this point Balloter gave up and Transmitter seemed about to open a good lead. However, his work was not done. White Sand, skimming the rail, came up to offer a bold bid. To the amazement of his backers, Transmitter made White Sand hang. Then, with yards to go, Royal Business came up with a brilliant rush. Friedman went to the whip.

Georgetown's student and alumni rally Friday probably will be the biggest and most colorful in the school's history. An old-fashioned torchlight parade through the city will climax the festivities.

The traditional bonfire will blaze over the Hilltop campus starting at 7 o'clock, while the entire student body gathers for the special ceremonies.

Rookie Gets His Wish; Marries, Settles Down

Philadelphia, Oct. 24 (AP).—A year ago, William T. (Bill) Nagel, rookie second baseman for the Philadelphia Athletics, came up from Memphis, Tenn., and announced:

"Let me have a good year with the A's and I'll get married and settle down and take this baseball business seriously."

Today Nagel, 24, announced he would be married Thursday to Rita F. Prendergast, 20-year-old former waitress. They will live in Memphis or New Orleans.

HAZEL W. was hard ridden to gain prominent position leaving backstretch, came willingly through stretch, but was no match for winner. CHERRY'S CHILD, slow to begin, came gamely in final quarter. HENRY TAIT was hard ridden and had no excuses.

LITTLE DAN, landing poorly at several fences, but having good speed on flat, was closest to early pace of WAR PORT, assumed command when pacemaker tired, drew out, withstood challenge of SPINACH and was drawing away easily at end. SPINACH, knocked off stride by FLYING FEATHERS after second jump, recovered to improve position steadily, moved up to LITTLE DAN approaching twelfth fence and weakened thereafter. ITSAMAID dropped far out of it in first mile, rallied when placed to drive and closed gamely. PIMOCHIO, close up early, dropped back and came again when placed to intermittent punishment in closing quarter. LONE GALLANT made a bad landing at tenth fence and failed to recover.

Selections at Laurel

Dear Al:

There is more to the name of Last Message than a mere label on the 4-year-old filly which performs for the Tall Trees Stable. Frank Navin, then president of the Detroit Tigers, telephoned his trainer from Detroit. "There's a filly to be sold at the Lexington sales tonight and she's by Hustle On. I want you to buy her," said Navin. A few hours later the big league magnate was killed while horseback riding. That was three years ago. When the filly became of racing age, Mrs. Navin, who still owns the Tall Trees Stable, named her Last Message. There was a slight mistake in the column yesterday. I meant to say that Alan Clarke was the former owner of Hazel W and Lady Mowlee instead of the owner. I know it is tough to think about mother nature when you're loser, but the next time you are out here, come up to the back of the stands and look at the job she has done with her autumn paint brush on the trees along the backstretch. I say come up high because there's a field in back of the trees that is so green it looks like some artist turned over a paint pot there and it makes a brilliant background for the browns, yellows, reds and light greens of the trees. Or would you rather have a winner? Mrs. L. S. B. writes that the sure winner at the tracks is the horse named "Photograph." And thanks to her for some kind words. Hilton Dabson, injured in a spill at Saratoga, is improving and says he could be ready to ride at Bowie but will wait for winter racing. Dabson is a busy young man, owning a profitable jockey supply business here in the town of Laurel. The Washington Handicap on Saturday has $15,000 in added money, but the Selima Stakes will be the richest race. Due to nomination and entry fees it probably will be worth $25,000 to the winner. This race is exclusively for "gal" juveniles. Horses belonging to Hal Price Headley and the Millsdale Stable are shipping into Pimlico. Now for the winners. BILL.

First race—Biablah has the needed early foot to get to the front in the opener. Toting a light package and with conditioning received at Havre, he will be hard to catch. Nansemond is the logical contender after several good efforts with this company. Scullery Maid is not outmatched and has a good chance.

Second race—Good Chance received a prep on the flat last week to fit him for this race. He is a consistent performer among the country's star 'chasers and his usual effort should see him home in front. He Goes was second in New York; may go well. Yemasee is in clever hands and might surprise.

Third race—Gold Teddy closed ground strongly when competing against better grade juveniles in his Laurel debut. He raced well previously in New York and should prove equal to whipping this sort. Chief contention is expected to come from Career Girl, representing the Bryson Stable. La Scala is a dangerous contender.

Fourth race — Glorious Time turned in an excellent effort in the Richard Johnson Stakes to take a three-length beating for all the money. Is well placed today and should score. Thorn Apple won her last, whipping a field of shifty fillies. Predicate can better a poor race last outing.

Fifth race—Pernie displayed an unsuspected turn of speed to finish third behind War Minstrel and Unerring, running within 2 seconds of the track record. He should register over this field. Bull Whip tries a route after several good trials in sprints. He has the class to be dangerous. The Milky Way entry for show.

Sixth race—Careful Miss met with repeated interference in her last race which, with clear sailing, she might have won. Contending in a like field of platers today, she gets high figure. Zostera has the class to beat these horses but late form has been poor. Airacuda ran a miserable race last start; can do better.

Seventh race—Burner indicates from late races that he is primed for his best effort after freshening up from a successful Saratoga campaign. Knight's Sox comes down from New England where he held his own with this sort. Connie Plaut might provide strong contention if he runs.

Eighth race—Bounding Count, recently second to High Tension in good time, is tight fitted and can be relied upon for his usual honest effort. Portunus won his last but records indicate inconsistency. Daytonian was a beaten favorite last start and is capable of doing better than shown.

Best bet—Glorious Time.

Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., won this year's tournament at the Wee Burn Club, Noroton, Conn.

Dolly Val Wins Narragansett Feature Purse

Scores Length Victory Over Cardinals; Pays Backers $9.40 Ticket

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., Oct. 24.—Sparingly raced this year after a strenuous campaign last season, James Emery's Dolly Val scored her second triumph in five starts this season when she won the mile and 70 yards Brockeon Purse today at Narragansett Park in 1:43 4-5.

The 4-year-old daughter of Jean Val Jean finished a length in front of Paul Kelly's Cardinalis, which had 2½ lengths on Mrs. E. J. Powers' Blazing Heat. In fourth position was Harvey Enger's Pumpgun, with the favorite, Weston Adams' Listaro, seventh in the field of eight.

Listaro was the fifth consecutive favorite to finish out of the money.

The victory was worth $840 to Dolly Val, which paid $9.40, $6 and $5.10. Cardinalis returned $11.20 and $5.50 and Blazing Heat $4.20.

There was a long delay at the gate caused by the antics of C. H. Scott's Scandalous, which eventually broke from the outside. Cardinalis showed the most early speed and took the lead around the first turn, with Leo J. Marks' Merrymood and Blazing Heat closest to him.

Dolly Val ran fourth down the backstretch, but through the far turn Jockey Wells sent the filly after the leader, who was passed as they turned into the homestretch.

Dolly Val pulled away steadily in the last eighth of a mile while Pumpgun passed Merrymood in the final flight to the wire.

Life Insurance Sales Here 15% Over Year Ago

Total for Nine Months $45,840,000, a Gain of 5% Over 1938 Period

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Aggregate sales of ordinary life insurance in Washington in September amounted to $4,576,000, a gain of 15 per cent over that month a year ago, and in the first nine months reached the sum of $45,840,000, an advance of 5 per cent over the comparative period last year, according to the monthly report of Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, Hartford, Conn.

Maryland sales were up 14 per cent and 4 per cent, respectively, September business totaling $6,811,000 and the nine months, $68,032,000. Virginia sales of $5,782,000 were off 7 per cent on the month but the year-to-date total of $62,951,000 was 4 per cent ahead of 1938.

The United States reported exactly the same amount of new business in September, $422,597,000, but a gain of 6 per cent in the nine months when a total of $4,776,479,000 was written. North Carolina was up 1 per cent for the month and 2 per cent for the year; South Carolina, off 20 per cent and up 3 per cent, and West Virginia, up 3 per cent for the month and even with last year for the nine months.

The South Atlantic States totaled $43,595,000 in new business, a gain of 1 per cent in September, and a total of $445,705,000 in the nine months, an increase of 4 per cent, the Hartford report stated. Washington led Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Los Angeles, New York, Philadelphia and St. Louis in September percentage gains, but was behind Detroit. In the nine months the Capital followed all these cities except New York, where sales were up only 2 per cent.

Value of Insurance

Life insurance guarantees the worth of human values against destruction by death, disability or old age, thereby maintaining the democratic ideal which sets these values above all others, Harold D. Krafft, chartered life underwriter, of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association, said in a speech last night, made as part of the local observance of the 1939 annual message of life insurance, over Station WMAL.

"It is correct, I believe, to say that the chief value of democracy lies in its recognition of the importance of human values as the key to all the other benefits of a civilization such as ours. Human values are primarily dependent upon the earning power of the individual. This ability to work and earn is one that can be completely destroyed by death, disability or old age.

"Life insurance," he explained, "is the economic instrument we have devised to underwrite and replace these human values. It offers to all an opportunity to save and make provision for the future; to shield one's dependents as well as oneself from the hardships that follow destruction of earning power.

"The importance of life insurance to the economic hopes of individuals," he reminded, "is seen in the fact that eight out of every ten estates left by men today are made up exclusively of life insurance proceeds; that 64,000,000 of us own 125,000,000 policies worth $110,000,000. Whatever it means to individuals, life insurance, just as any working democracy, is of great importance to the community.

Benefits to Policyholders

"In 1938 living policyholders and beneficiaries received from life insurance $2,600,000,000. In the period 1933 through 1938, life insurance has paid out nearly $3,000,000,000 more than was necessary for Federal relief in the same period. Nearly $1,000,000,000 was paid in 1938 to the beneficiaries of slightly more than 1,000,000 policies, providing the money for food, clothing and shelter to families that had lost their breadwinner."

Mr. Krafft said that more than 60 per cent of the $2,500,000,000 went to living policyholders in the form of endowments, retirement income, cashed-in policies, dividends, etc., providing money in emergency, making people more secure. In every instance, it served a necessary purpose and did a great deal to relieve the community of caring for people who otherwise might very well have become dependent upon private or public charity.

"Through their co-operation in life insurance, Americans make another community contribution that cannot be measured in dollars and cents but is nevertheless just as real," he concluded. "Throughout all of history man has had to provide for himself or turn to a paternalistic government for food and shelter. He must be either self-reliant or dependent. We have today, of course, a portion of our population who, through no fault of their own, must turn to the community for help.

"Generally speaking, however, each of us must make our own way if we would remain free in the American tradition. That is the tremendous social virtue of life insurance; the incentive it offers to self-reliance, the opportunity it offers the individual to save and make provision for the future so that he and his dependents will not become dependent upon the community."

Libbey-Owens Wins Award for Industrial Merit

San Francisco, Oct. 24.—The annual "award of merit for outstanding industrial accomplishment" was awarded today to the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co. for the second successive year by the National Glass Distributors' Association at its twenty-fifth annual convention here.

A. H. Brauner, president of the distributors' association, made the award to G. P. MacNichol, jr., vice president of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Co. in charge of sales. Brauner said the award was earned by the Libbey-Owens-Ford Co. on two counts: (1) "Its contribution to the greater safety of the American motoring public by increasing the appreciation andeuse of safety plate glass in motor vehicles, and (2) its contribution to the plate glass industry and its service to the public through its vast national informative program focusing attention upon the many kinds of glass useful in the daily life of the Nation."

Mr. MacNichol told the glass distributors that mass production has in many lines out-paced distribution facilities in this country and that better business, including that in the glass industry, awaited a solution of the problem of distribution, which, he said, was the weakest cog in today's economic machine.

Majestic Radio, Suspended by Curb, Files Petition

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—State Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., today ordered an inquiry into the affairs of Majestic Radio & Television Corporation, following temporary suspension of trading of that company's stock in the Curb Exchange. Directors of the company, meeting here, authorized officers to proceed with reorganization plans in Chicago, where main offices and plant are located.

Chicago, Oct. 24 (AP).—The Majestic Radio & Television Corporation filed in Federal court today a voluntary petition for reorganization under section 11 of the Chandler act. The firm, which manufactures radio receiving sets in Chicago, proposed to pay half the claims of unsecured creditors in stock and a balance in cash over a period of two years and would continue in business.

The statement said that the action was necessitated by the failure of Walter P. Chrysler, jr., and the Allied International Investing Corporation to exercise options on 300,000 shares of stock. The options expired yesterday. The statement said the firm had depended on the sale of the shares for working capital.

Madrid, Oct. 24 (AP).—International Business Machines Corporation announced today that it was setting up an independent company in Spain to handle its interests here.

This is the first announced action of any American company toward expansion of interests in Spain since the end of the civil war.

Freight Traffic Marks Up Best Gain in Decade

Third Quarter Loadings 16.8% Above Second, 14.7% Over Year Ago

New York, Oct. 24.—Reflecting the expansion of business, which was stimulated by the outbreak of the war in Europe, freight car loadings showed a sharp rise in September, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. As a result of this spurt, loadings in the third quarter were 16.8 per cent larger than in the second quarter and 14.7 per cent larger than in the corresponding period last year. This increase over last year was greater than that anticipated by the Shippers' Advisory Boards. They had forecasted an increase of 9.9 per cent.

The increase in loadings from the second to the third quarter was exceptionally large. This is shown by the fact that it exceeded the gain for this period in any previous year during the past decade. It even exceeded the sharp spurt in 1933, when a speculative business boom occurred as a result of various inflationary steps taken by the Government in an attempt to bring about a recovery from the depression.

The Shippers' Advisory Boards expect that loadings in the fourth quarter of this year will exceed the volume of a year ago by 13.8 per cent. It is possible that this forecast will be realized, since it will mean an increase of only 4.3 per cent over the third quarter. There are several instances in the past when the gains from the third to the fourth quarter have been larger than 4.3 per cent.

Fourth Quarter Prospects

At the same time, there are reasons why too much assurance should not be placed in this forecast. In the first place, the usual tendency is for loadings in the fourth quarter to be smaller than loadings in the third quarter. In the second place, the increase from the second quarter to the third quarter was so exceptionally large that a reaction would not be illogical. After a sharp spurt from the second to the third quarter in 1933, loadings in the fourth quarter of that year showed a decrease of 7.9 per cent from the third quarter's volume. It should, therefore, not be surprising if loading in the fourth quarter of 1939 failed to reach the volume forecasted by the Shippers' Boards. Nevertheless, there still remains a good possibility that the forecast will be realized, since this year is an exceptional one with war as a factor and with speculation consequently characterizing the situation.

If the Shippers' Boards' forecast for the fourth quarter is realized, the annual number of freight cars loaded this year will total 33,925,000, an increase of 11.3 per cent over the 30,469,000 loaded in 1938. Despite such an increase, loadings this year will still be considerably below the 1936 and 1937 volumes, and far below the pre-depression volume in 1929. Car loadings in 1929 totaled 52,828,000.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Walter Malowan, secretary and treasurer of the Regency, 15 East Sixty-seventh street, and a member of the secret society of no trump artists, is continually having unusual experiences.

We don't know whether it is his accent which makes his otherwise perfect English impossible to understand or whether it is, as Dorothy Sims says, "the result of his feudal training."

One of the things that has contributed to Walter's fame as a bridge player is his management of the dummy. Witness this hand which he played in a rubber bridge game and won ten tricks at four spades through an end play.

It required a good guess to bring about the throw-in situation, proving once again that good players are not only good but also lucky. Here are the cards, with neither side vulnerable and West dealer:

	♠ J 8 7 3 ♡ K 4 2 ◇ 7 5 4 ♣ Q J 5
♠ K 2 ♡ 7 5 ◇ A K 10 6 3 ♣ A 10 9 4	WEST — NORTH — EAST — SOUTH (Malowan)	♠ 6 4 ♡ Q J 10 ◇ Q J 9 8 ♣ 8 7 3 2
	♠ A Q 10 9 5 ♡ A 9 8 6 3 ◇ 2 ♣ K 6

Th. bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Pass	Pass	Dbl
2 ♣	Pass	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ◇

Opening lead: King, diamond.

Malowan placed West with 5—5 or 5—4 distribution and most of the high cards from the bidding. West might or might not have the spade king, but he probably held no more than two of the suit.

West led the king of diamonds and followed with the ace, which declarer trumped. Dummy was entered with the king of hearts and the third diamond was ruffed. Now Malowan played the king of clubs; West won with the ace and played another heart. The heart ace took the trick and the queen and jack of clubs were cashed, completing the stripping of the hands.

Malowan played the jack of spades; East failed to cover and Malowan decided to follow his hunch that the king lay with West. He put on the spade ace, followed with the queen and West was endplayed. After winning the spade king he had to lead a diamond or a club, either of which would allow declarer to discard the third heart from dummy and trump with the last spade, the ten, in his hand. North's two high spades would then take care of the two losing hearts.

Malowan made four spades, losing a diamond, a club and a spade.

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Oct. 24.—On his first visit since the outbreak of war to troops in the south of England, King George VI yesterday watched hundreds of men learning to handle some of the British army's deadliest weapons.

The king, wearing the khaki service uniform of a field marshal, and carrying a gas mask slung over his shoulder, followed the routine training of a batch of new recruits in their early twenties as they marched up and down under the practiced eye of a sergeant, and jabbed at targets with fixed bayonets. Later, he visited the gymnasiums and saw men dressed in shorts receiving physical training instruction.

Nazi Plot Seen In Argentina

Buenos Aires, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—The newspaper Critica charged yesterday that German funds were being used to finance a campaign for restoration to Argentina of the Falkland Islands, in order to create friction between this country and Great Britain.

Britain's occupation of the islands which served as a naval base during the World War long has been disputed by Argentine claims, which formed the basis for recent agitation.

Seasoned Timber

Chapter 32

"You don't know what you're talking about," said Timothy. "You ought to have heard him going on against women last night—when he was telling me about breaking off his engagement. It's made him sick of the very sight of girls, he says."

Aunt Lavinia laughed, old age's insulting laugh at naivete. Someone banged the knocker on the front door, and because it was very cold for anyone to wait, Timothy stepped quickly to open it. Jules stood there, muffled to the eyes, his tall 'cello box beside him.

"Oh, come in, Jules!" called Aunt Lavinia. She pushed Timothy to one side and, taking possession of the young guest, began to bully him with animation about the tempo of some minuet or other. Unwinding his many-layered wraps, the boy answered with spirit.

When his ugly, fine and sensitive face became visible, Timothy was struck by the change in its expression. The shy melancholy dignity was gone. As he argued laughingly with the queer old lady, and peeled off his galoshes, he looked like any boy of almost 15. "It is not either!" he cried, cramming his mittens into his pocket. "What's a person going to do with that run if you start as fast as that?"

"You just come in here where the metronome is!" she said threateningly. Both of them ignored Timothy as though he were invisible.

Lonley and aimless, he stood for a moment, exiled from the eager caring of the other two, and thought, How the meaning goes out of life again when Susan isn't here! This is how I felt about things before she came. But even to say her name in his thoughts brought her back to him. Smiling, well contented, he took her hand in his as he limped up the stairs to his study to go on with his letters.

FROM WHERE he lay, sprawled on the couch, as much at ease after 25 hours of Clifford as if he had been with them all winter, Canby asked idly, "Say, Uncle Tim, how'd you ever happen to come up here in the first place? You and Uncle Downer were New York boys, weren't you?"

"New York and Edinburgh!" said Aunt Lavinia firmly.

"Oh, yes, I'd forgotten your folks were English."

"Scottish!"

"Were you born in the old country? asked Canby.

"No, no. On West Twelfth street."

"But only th-r-e-e months after his parents landed."

"Conceived in the Old World, born in the New—like democracy," commented Canby.

The old woman ruffled her feathers. "No Coulton was ever a Democrat!" she said tartly.

The two men laughed. "You're a pippin, Aunt Lavinia," Canby told her, "a museum piece. But Uncle Tim, from Edinburgh to Clifford is queerer yet. How'd it happen?"

"D'ye know," said Aunt Lavinia, "I never heard Tim say how, myself!"

But she did not listen. It was late. In honor of Canby's last evening with them they were sitting up indefinitely and she had been having restless nights of late. It was one of her low periods. She now dropped off to sleep between one word and the next, her long bony figure collapsed in a corner of the armchair, her gray head tipped back, her mouth a little open. Her knotted hands, stiff even in sleep, were gray, the fingernails black. Timothy's eye was caught by them. His face grew grave. He sighed and shook his head.

Canby thought he feared their talk would disturb her, and asked, with lifted eyebrows and a sidelong look toward her, if they would better leave her sleep. But Timothy shook his head. "If she woke up alone, she—she might be startled, you know," he spoke guardedly. "When you were with us as a boy, didn't she ever . . ."

"Why, no," said Canby, surprised that he might be supposed to know how an old woman woke up from a nap. He glanced over at the time-ravaged sleeping face, its defences down, looked away, shocked, and asked, "How old is she?"

"I DIDN'T EXACTLY mean that this was a good time to talk about her."

"Oh . . ." said Canby, abashed. "I see. No of course not." He pushed another pillow under his head. "Well, let's hear your story. I begin to think you came up to the states to keep something dark."

"There's nothing interesting to tell." Timothy waited.

"Come on!" said Canby. "Let's have a house party. I've told you everything. Come clean!"

Timothy smiled at the quip. "All right. Let's see. The first year after I graduated from Columbia I taught in a public high school. A big one. About 6,000 boys."

Canby rose on one elbow. "Did you say thousand?"

"That wasn't the worst. The trouble was there were hundreds who couldn't be squeezed into the building."

"Where'd you have classes for them? On the street corners?"

"Just about. Factory lofts, furnace cellars, attics, empty stores. Too hot, too cold, no blackboards, no books, you never knew where you were going to be sent, from one day to—oh, well, never mind. That wasn't the point." He stopped, lighted a cigarette, held it in his hand as he went on, "Towards the end of the year I was assigned—one of the grand shifts all around—to keep order in a newly-improvised study hall. The seats had those contraptions under them to hold hats, and you'd better believe it didn't take the boys 5 minutes to find out they could get a twang out of the wire they were made of. It sounds funny. But it was my fall the can was tied to, so it wasn't very funny to me. Those kids had themselves a wonderful time. I couldn't hear myself think. I'd dash over where the noise was loudest, but the boys there would look innocent and stick their noses in their books. Then the boys back of me would start it up—and then they'd all laugh, the whole 200 of them! They certainly had me on the run." He looked back at the scene, and said more seriously, "You see, none of them had ever been in my classes. Not one of them had ever laid eyes on me before. Nor I on them."

"How old were you?"

"About 21." He paused, regretting having started this wishing he had put Canby off with an evasion.

"Well, then what . . ."

"Well, the end of the first period came. I had 3 minutes before the next bunch was due. But that's all the good it did me. I was in a cold sweat. Literally. Were you ever in a real cold sweat?"

"I'll say I was!" cried Canby, wincing. "The day I went to tell Mildred that I was breaking the engagement. It makes me sick to think of it. Go on! Go on!"

"Well, you know then what it feels like. I was just in a panic, not an idea in my head. I couldn't imagine what anybody could do—single-handed against so many. Before I knew it, the first of the boys in the second period began to straggle in. They were grinning at me. I could see the word had been passed around. The minute they sat down, the twanging began."

After a silence, I said 'Go on!,' urged Canby.

"Well, I lost my head. I saw the assistant principal going by the door. He was a man I despised. Anybody would. But I've got a yellow streak, always had, and it came out then. I ran out and appealed to him. He said, 'I'll show you how to fix that.' The boys were crowding in now. It was almost time for the next period to begin. He stood by the door for a minute or two, looked them over as they shuffled by, picked out a little fellow in short pants, and knocked him down."

"What!" cried Canby.

"Stepped in like a prize fighter, with a short hook to the corner of the jaw and sent the kid to the floor as if he'd been hit with an ax. When he was down, he kicked him. Hard. The kid screamed. The principal said between his teeth, 'Get up!' and kicked him again. Harder. The little boy got up and stumbled along to his seat, his arm over his eyes, crying. The other boys hung their heads, took their places in perfect order, got out their books and began to study quietly. He stood there, stic' ;g ov' his jaw, and looking them over. "he only thing you could hear was the kid sobbing. Then the principal said, plenty loud enough to be heard, 'Now, Hulme, you won't have any more trouble. If you do, just try that.'

"You're making this up!" said Canby incredulously.

TIMOTHY smiled coldly. "He knew what he was talking about. I didn't have any trouble from that time on. That word was passed around too. And then I was fool enough to go to that man and ask him, 'But the boy you . . . that boy hadn't done a thing. Why did you . . .?' He laughed at me, 'Of course any nitwit would know you have to pick out one that won't fight back.'"

The narrator made no comment. Canby needed none. "I see," he said, and then, "That kind of thing wouldn't be allowed nowadays. It'd be against the law."

"You don't suppose it was 'allowed' then, do you?" cried Timothy. "But it would happen again.

"I get you," said Canby. He reached for more pillows and propped himself up to a sitting position. "So you got out. I should think so!"

"Yes, my simple-hearted, magnanimous idea of what to do in that situation was to go somewhere else." His forgotten cigarette burned down to the end, now scorched his fingers. "Damnation!" he cried and flung it into the fire.

"Hell, Uncle Tim, you couldn't have done anything if you stayed."

Timothy thought, "What's got into me to go back over all this?" He told himself, "Oh, well, Canby'll be gone tomorrow. I may never see him again," and went on. The fact was that having begun he could not stop. "How many boys have been knocked down since I turned my back on them, I wonder?"

"Go on! You talk like a woman! What'd be the sense of staying where you wouldn't do anything?"

"Well, anythow, I didn't. I had one good look at what needs to be done in the century I live in—and walked away."

"How do you mean—what needs to be done."

"Managing large numbers without affronting human dignity."

Canby began argumentatively, "But I don't call that the real problem. I should say that the real . . ."

"Well, you're wrong. That's what's the matter with us. The minute your group gets so big you don't know anybody in it and they don't know you—there's hell to pay. And most groups nowadays are that big. The older decent ways of organizing life just crumple up under the weight of modern crowds."

Yes, Canby's nod showed that he followed him, as far as that.

Timothy's voice rose a note or two, as he went on, "But when modern trucks get too heavy for bridges made of wood, did we just let them fall down? And give up bridges altogether? And go back to fording and swimming—and drowning? We did not. Our collective gray-matter thought of using steel. But do you see anybody seriously trying to invent new and decent ways to keep order in crowds? You do not. They accept indecent ones. They turn tail—like me up here. Or they holler for fascism, like me down there."

"What's fascism got to do with it?"

"What was that sock on the jaw but fascism? Wasn't it the jaw of somebody who couldn't fight back? Knocking down enough people and kicking them when they're down, to scare the rest into letting you get away with murder—the minute Mussolini began to stick out his jaw, I knew what he was up to. When Hitler knocked down the Jews and began to kick them, I recognized the guesture."

He said to himself, "Now this is enough. I'm ranting. What does Canby care?" But his impetus carried him on, "But I honestly didn't intend to stay up here in safety all my life. At least I think I didn't intend to. But maybe my yellow streak got me there too. I meant it for a respite, till I could think what else to do. At least I think I meant it for a respite. But the first summer when I went back to England for a vacation I met Ellie and got married. And Ellie died. And right after that Aunt Lavinia came back from Australia."

THEY LOOKED over at her. She had slid lower in her chair, her jaw had dropped, a thread of saliva trickled from her mouth.

Canby sat up, said with energy, "You can talk all you want to about turning tail, but, by God! Uncle Tim, you've done your full share. The way Uncle Downer never . . ."

Timothy cut him short with a displeased gesture. "Did you ever see a slacker without a plausible alibi?" he asked.

Canby said nothing. Sitting on the edge of the couch he filled his pipe, tamped the tobacco down thoughtfully, lighted it, and began to smoke. In the silence Aunt Lavinia's occasional droning snore could be heard.

Timothy was annoyed to have let himself go. He lifted his arms and clasped his hands back of his head. Through some memory-association this position often loosed his taut nerves, often brought him a memory of his boyhood. Sometimes, after he was quite relaxed, he caught a distant echo of his mother's voice, singing. The voice he heard now was Susan's. "It's been so wonderful here this winter. You've been so . . ." He closed his eyes and saw her face, Correggio-sweet, cross-lighted between the fire and the lamp. He smiled—and perceived that Canby had asked him a question. "I beg your pardon, Can, I missed the first part of that," he said.

Canby began over again, "I was just wondering, Uncle Tim, if you'd ever thought about how the Academy could be developed? Old New England academies done over new are all the style. Lots of them are being turned into the peppiest kind of prep schools. You could do it here, easy. Clifford's an awfully pretty old place. Now, if you had some young fellow as assistant principal or manager, somebody with business experience—I bet it would not be five years before you would work up a clientele of Middle Western and city families that'd bring as much prosperity to the town as a shoe factory."

Timothy opened his mouth to speak, closed it, and after an instant, said patiently, "Let's hear your idea."

"Well, I haven't really figured it out yet—not the details. I only thought of it today. But I can see right off that you'd have to start by jacking up the tuition fees. Any American parent in the income bracket you'd want would be scared off by your low fees, see? And that'd work both ways. Give you scads more money. Just think what you could do with some real cash. Wouldn't I like to see some live-wire, crackerjack teachers at the old school!"

To Be Continued.

Banquet Held To Celebrate Y.M.C.A. Drive

Many Notables Attend Fete; Attache at Polish Embassy Joins Group

A magician, a scientist, a movie actress and a Polish diplomat Monday night wished success to the Y. M. C. A. membership drive at a banquet celebrating enrollment of more than 50 new members.

Count Anthony Tarnowski, attache at the Polish Embassy, joined the "Y" Monday. He told the jubilant committeemen that he did not want to disturb them with "the gloomy picture of my country," but he assured them it would be restored after the war. He left Poland shortly before the war began and reached this country after it had started.

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, sang a humorous song, and Theodore T. Golden, lawyer and past president of the Society of American Magicians, puzzled the group with a chinese ring trick.

Miss Ann Rutherford, movie star sweetheart of "Andy Hardy," wished them luck, waved her hand, posed for photographers and rushed out "to make the next show."

A free ride about the city in a blimp was awarded to Arthur C. Pearson for enrolling 30 new members since Thursday. Dan Arnold received first prize for leading the team enrolling the highest number of members.

About 75 committeemen at the banquet wore paper "sombreros" and sang cowboy songs after the "big feed." The membership drive is organized as a "round-up," with each of 16 teams headed by a "foreman." The goal for the drive is 1,200 members. The committee announced the addition of 524 new members to date.

Police Hunt Victim Of Thug So They Can File Charges

If the woman who was beaten by a colored bandit in an attempted purse-snatching at Eighteenth and Q streets northwest at 10:20 p. m. Saturday night reads this story, will she please communicate with Capt. Ira E. Keck, at Detective Headquarters.

The man, about 35, now held at Third Precinct Station, grabbed the woman's purse but dropped it when she grappled with him, knocked her down and fled. J. S. Long and his wife, of 1311 P street northwest, saw the attack. Long got out of his car, followed the bandit on foot and called police while his wife trailed him in the car. Third Precinct Patrolman John Titus and Cyrus Thompson arrested the man.

Result: Police have in custody a criminal, now on parole for assault with a dangerous weapon in New Jersey and who has confessed, but needs a complainant for court arraignment. The victim of the attack has made no report to police.

Industry Still Employs Children

Employment of children less than 16 years old has not disappeared in American industry, it has been demonstrated in the first year of administering the child-labor provisions of the fair labor standards act of 1938, it was said Monday by the children's bureau, Labor Department.

At the end of August, the bureau had found nearly 500 children illegally employed in establishments producing goods for interstate commerce. One-third of them were reported to be less than 14 years old.

3 Found Slain In Lonely Road

Reno, Nev., Oct. 24 (AP).—Two women and a man, all of New York City, were found shot to death in a lonely highway late yesterday, and Coroner Francis J. Cunningham said it looked like a double slaying and suicide.

The dead were Nils Alben Almgren Webster, his estranged wife, and her traveling companion, Louise Schmeltz.

Cunningham said it appeared the man might have shot the two women and then himself.

U. S. Officials Not Violating Presidential Order By Teaching on Side, Merit System Chiefs Rule

By Alfred Friendly

Complaints that Federal officials, teaching everything from administration to zymology in a score of Government and private schools and universities in Washington, thereby have been violating Presidential orders, were scotched yesterday by the Civil Service Commission.

In a departmental circular, the commission said there is no general prohibition against teaching in schools and universities by Federal officers and employes. The only prohibition, the circular pointed out, is one issued by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1905 forbidding Government employes to teach persons "with a view to their special preparation for the examinations of the United States Civil Service Commissin."

The commission's cricular came on the heels of complaints registered with Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt that they were some of his topmost officials, such as Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, and John J. Corson, director of the SSB's old-age insurance bureau, were "professoring" at a local university. The FSA declined to grow alarmed over the situation.

Similar "complaints" could, of course, be leveled at robably more than 10 0other prominent Federal executives. Almost every university in and around Washington offers courses in which the teachers, or at least, lecturers, are Government employes. The great Agricultural Department Graduate School depends largely on Government persons as instructors. In an increasing number of Federal establishments, "in-service training" courses are being taught by the establishments' own personnel. The Civil Service Commission itself recently announced an extensive series of such courses, with the instructors almost all commission officers.

The 1905 order, it was explained, was inspired by activities of "Civil Service Preparation Schools" of more or less shady reputation, which advertised a faculty of Government employes. In some cases, too, unscrupulous Federal officials capitalized on inside knowledge of civil service examinations by teaching prospective examinees.

The commission has decided that there is a wide differences between courses specially designed and advertised to help job-hunters pass Government examinations, and courses on subjects pertaining to Government. In the latter, it may well be that Government enrolled employes use the instruction obtained to pass examinations for better jobs. The courses, however, are definitely not designed to coach applicants for specific examinations.

Duff-Cooper Sees Nazi Blow Soon To Break Blockade

New York, Oct. 24.—Alfred Duff-Cooper, former first lord of the British admiralty, said yesterday he believed Germany would "strike hard on the Western Front, and very soon, probably before the winter season."

Germany is now in the same position with regard to food and other supplies as she was in 1918, Duff-Cooper continued. The shortage of essential supplies makes it necessary for her to strike promptly, he said, adding that such action would possibly take the form of an invasion of Holland and Belgium.

Women Today Held Equal in Talent to Napoleon's Wife

Miss Mary Sabarth, Agriculture Graduate School lecturer on famous women of history, Monday told the Women's National Democratic Club about Empress Eugenie wife of Napoleon III—one of the world's cleverest and most beautiful women whose career failed when she got into politics.

Speaking at the club's luncheon, Miss Sabarth told also of Mme. de Maintenon's 20 years of patience and wisdom in marrying Louis XIV and of Catherine of Russia.

Doctors Find Skinny Men Live Longer Than Fat Ones

But Those With Baywindows Tend to Have Less Pneumonia and Cancer, According To Study Reported at Johns Hopkins U.

By the Associated Press

Providence, R. I., Oct. 24.—Human body shapes that add an average of 25 years to life were reported to the National Academy of Sciences yesterday.

All were for men only because the studies have not been made on women, though feminine shapes may have the same effect.

In general, it is bad for a man to be far from the average American in weight, chest size or some other dimensions. Those who lean toward the overweight class are taking more chances of premature meetings with the reaper than the men who tend to become skinny.

The study was made by Dr. Raymond Pearl, of Johns Hopkins University, who a little more than a year ago made the report that tobacco smoking always shortens life. Collaborating with him was Dr. Edwin Moffit, of Johns Hopkins.

Reported on 2,332 Men

They reported on 2,332 white men, whose ages at examination were in the late 30s or early 40s. Half of them proved to be long-lived and half short-lived.

When examined, not one showed the slightest sign of the disease or the "accident" that afterward killed him. The 2,332 died of six different causes, heart disease, kidney trouble, diabetes, cancer, pneumonia and accidents.

The long-lived who died of heart disease, pneumonia, cancer and kidney trouble lived from 24 to 29 years longer than the short-lived who died of the same causes. The long-lived with diabetes lived 21 years longer.

The shapes that forecast heart and kidney early deaths were overweight, larger abdominal girths and chests either unusually large or unusually small. The stomach girths, however, were not as significant signs as overweight.

Overweight Signals Cancer

Overweight tended also to be a sign of coming cancer. For this disease underweight also was a bad sign.

For diabetics who died early, Dr. Pearl said body weight and all girths were larger than in the other men examined.

The men with incipient bay windows tended to have less pneumonia and cancer, and this protuberance, taken by itself, was no indication of susceptibility to diabetes.

The examiners found that a high pulse rate was a forecast of early death, including, curiously enough, accidents.

Elevated blood pressures, contrary to what most persons expect, were a sign of long life in the heart cases.

Height, Dr. Pearl said, had no effect at all on length of life. Neither did chest expansion, despite a general belief that a good, big expansion is desirable.
